Lieut. Becker Charged With Murder.

ON CONFESSION OF ROSE WHO TELLS A SHOCKING STORY.

Says Becker Ordered Killing of Rosenthal Throwing Imprisonment if He Was Not Obedient—Prisoners Terrified—Fear Return to Tomb—Becker Spends Quiet Night There, However—Not Closing Around Him.

New York, July 30.—The indictment of Police Lieut. Charles Becker for the murder of the gambler Herman Rosenthal soon after the confessions of "Bald Jack" Rose, "Bridgie" Webber, and Harry Vallon, revealed to-day to District Attorney Whitman, the "police system" in all its hideousness.

The public prosecutor, following the trail of the three confessions, continued his search for evidence that would implicate those higher up than Becker, and more indictments of police officials are expected by the District Attorney.

The arrest of Becker lays bare a scandal in the police department that threatens to shake it to its foundations, for District Attorney Whitman believes the story of police graft has only half been told.

"Bald Jack" Rose confessed that Becker came to him and fairly desperate over Rosenthal's intention of telling all he knew of his relations with the police lieutenant, said: "Rosenthal has lived too long. He has got to be put out of the way."

Rose told the public prosecutor and the Grand Jury how the murder band was hired at the instigation of Becker, and that after the killing Becker met Webber and himself and promised complete police protection.

The confession showed that the murderers of Rosenthal were "Lefty Louie," or Louis Rosenweig; Harry Horowitz, or "Gib the Blood," Frank Muller, or "Whitie Jack" Lewis, and "Dago Frank" Cirofici. Only Cirofici has been apprehended. These gunmen, members of the notorious "Big Jack" Zelig gang, furnished themselves with liquor, and then went out and shot Rosenthal for a price, said to be $5,000.

FEARED MURDER IN CELLS OF TOMBS.

Terror-stricken, Rose, Webber and Vallon spent the night in the public prosecutor's office, fearing that they would be murdered if they were taken to the Tombs prison.

District Attorney Whitman believes that his case against Lieut. Becker is without a flaw; that the confessions, taken separately, dovetailed and confirmed each other; and that from the testimony of other witnesses the case against Becker cannot be broken down. Squads of detectives scoured the city to-day for witnesses to corroborate each detail of the stories of Rose, Webber, and Vallon.

"Bald Jack" Rose, gambler, who says he was Becker's gambling house collector, felt the ground slipping from under day after day. Without money he was made to bear the weight of the crime alone. His counsel advised him to confess. Rose became completely terrified. Through his counsel, James M. Sullivan, he said:

"If you see to it that my wife and children are protected, I'll come across and tell the truth about this. I'm afraid it will be the end of me. No cell on earth will be strong enough to keep the life in a man who gives up about this killing."

Intimations were made to Rose that an indictment might be expected against him.

HORRIBLE STORY TOLD BY ROSE.

Then he confessed. Counsel for Webber and Vallon catching the drift of things, also advised their clients to tell the truth and become immunized.

Rose told District Attorney Whitman that for a long time he had been Becker's gambling house collector, that Becker, as head of the gambling house squad, smelled out profitable places and that each month collections were made. Becker did not get all the money, Rose says, but some of it was distributed to others.

Rosenthal was a thorn in Becker's side. Becker had pressed Rosenthal to the wall, according to Rose, and Rosenthal threatened to make things public.

NO USE GETTING NERVOUS, SAYS BECKER.

Six weeks before the killing, Rose says, Becker sent for him and said that Rosenthal must be made away with. Rose flinched at the words, he says, and Becker, noting his state of mind, remarked, according to Rose: "Now there is no use getting worried or nervous about this job. That dog has made too much trouble. What do you think I am in this department for? I can do what I please. I'll see to it that nobody gets into serious trouble. Now you go out and do whatever is necessary."

Rose went out he says and saw "Big Jack" Zelig to make a deal for his gun-men. Zelig was under indictment for carrying concealed weapons and the possibilities of a stay in Sing Sing prison did not appeal to him. Consequently, Rose says, when he promised to see that nothing happened when Zelig came to trial, there was no trouble getting the gun-men.

It was at this point in the proceedings that Rose backed somewhat out of the murder activities. All the gun-men were informed to be ready to kill Rosenthal who, in the meantime had been well shadowed day and night.

A few days before the killing, Rose says that he met Webber and Becker, and that while the three were talking it over Becker said to Webber: "This job got to be done, and Rose says they won't do it for him. Now, 'Bridgie' you can get it done. They all know you. You have got the money and I have the power. I'll protect everybody."

Then Becker, according to Rose, shook his fist in their faces and exclaimed, "If you don't do this, I'll put weapons on every one of you. I'll send you up for seven years. I'll show you what you'll get."

Rose and Webber say they believed that Lieut. Becker would send them away and had the power to do it. Then the murder plot unfolded itself quickly. Monday night came and with it the word for the gun-men to get together. Rose told how he got the assassins together and how, after the killing, he went over to the Hotel Metropole to see how the job had been done.

Rosenthal lay dead upon the sidewalk with a tablecloth spread over his body. Rose says he went to the telephone booth and called up Lieut. Becker, but he was so unnerved by the shock that he could only say this: "MY GOD! THIS IS HORRIBLE!"

ROSE.

"DON'T WORRY, I'LL PROTECT YOU"—BECKER.

"My God! This is horrible!"

Becker, Rose says in his confession, replied over the wire, in a steady voice: "Oh, don't worry. I'll protect you. Wait a few minutes and I'll be right down. Where will you be?"

An appointment was made to meet at Forty-Second street within a short distance of the scene of the murder.

There Rose says he met Webber and Becker, and Webber corroborated the Rose statement. They talked over what was the best thing to do under the circumstances, and parted after Becker had assured them that everything would be all right.

"The chase for the slayer became hot and finally Rose says that Becker advised them over the telephone to surrender. But that everything would come out all right. Of the real murderers Rose says in his confession: "Those poor devils didn't know what they were doing. They were full of booze. They had been told to kill, and they went out and did what they were told."

Webber and Vallon in their confessions supplied many missing links in the confession of Rose. Speaking of Becker and his alleged connection with gambling, Rose said:

"Why, of course, I was Becker's collector. Everybody knew it."

Webber himself says that his protection payments for his gambling house to Becker through Rose were $125 a month.

MR. BECKER SPENDS A QUIET NIGHT IN JAIL.

Lieut. Becker who has been suspended, spent a quiet night in the Tombs. "This is an awful plight for an innocent man to find himself in," said Becker this morning.

The three prisoners Rose, Webber and Vallon, were still in a state of terror this morning, though guarded by a squad of detectives who locked them in a room in a District Attorney's office. Webber was hysterical and frequently wept during the night.

The confession of Rose and the arrest and indictment of Becker created a sensation in the police department, and officials and patrolmen alike wondered who would be the next to be involved in the disclosures of the relations between the police and the gamblers.

That an investigation will be undertaken by the city into the police department that will rival the sensations of the Lexow and Maest investigations appeared to be a foregone conclusion to many police officials.

Hamilton, Ont., July 26.—Standing before Magistrate Jelfs at the King William Street Police Court this morning, Harry Gilmore of 80 West Burlington Street, swallowed carbolic acid and died before he reached the city hospital.

Gilmore had been summoned to appear on a charge of assaulting his wife. Just as he had been found guilty he lifted the vial to his lips. Officers hurried him to the auto ambulance, and with a couple of doctors working over him he was rushed to the hospital. ## When Papa Sleeps.

When my pa's awake he's still,
Dis alike you and me,
Never makes a bit of noise,
Dis still as he can be.

But when he goes to sleep, oh!
He makes such a clatter,
Scares you almost half to death,
Wond'ring what's the matter.

First he gives a growl or two,
Then begins to rumble;
Then lets out a snort or two;
Then, he'll groan and grumble.

Wonder if pa's broke inside,
Or been getting rusted?
'Spect I'd better have him fixed
Or he'll wake up busted.
