

Month in Toronto.

(Special Correspondence.)

It is a pity that the month of May has been so far from ideal in Toronto. The weather has been so variable that it has been difficult to plan for. The city has been so busy that it has been difficult to find time for anything but work. The city has been so busy that it has been difficult to find time for anything but work.

I dare say any of our local Bay boys would have thought nothing of it, but these top-heavy craft are unaccustomed to such buffeting as our mariners are used to.

I have been following the doings of Major Cotton and his assistant, Hon. Mr. Bennett's son with much interest. One of my contentions (as editor of the SUN) you will perhaps recollect, was that an aeroplane service was the ideal one for mails during the winter in Newfoundland. I am glad to see that what I foretold has actually happened, and one of my friends at home remembered my efforts sufficiently to cable me on the arrival of the first aerial mail.

The Telegram brings with it an atmosphere of "home" that I can hardly describe to you and the "pink-un," as my chums have labelled it, is as great a source of interest to strangers as to me.

Since writing the foregoing the death of a funeral of Sir John Galt Eaton has occurred. The funeral took place at the Methodist Memorial Church on Monday, when the streets were thronged with thousands of townspeople who went to pay their respects or as sightseers. The Eaton firm was well known in Newfoundland, and as many Newfoundlanders are employees it may interest you to know that they all speak in the highest terms of the treatment always accorded Eaton's was without exception the best employer in the city, paying the best wages, securing the shortest hours and the longest holidays for its employees. The late Sir John was on intimate terms with his humblest employee, and some idea of the policy pursued may be gleaned from the fact that his last Christmas card to the employees bore the legend "To my business associates," certainly a very neat touch and one calculated to win the affection of every "associate." The flowers were wonderful, and more than as many as half the population of your city must have passed before the body as it lay in state on Monday.

The new peal of bells for the Metropolitan Methodist Church has recently been placed in position and a special service was held last Sunday to dedicate them. They are very fine and the ringer who installed them has given many selections, playing many old favorite tunes every day at the noon hour when hundreds of people congregated to hear. They were a bit disappointing to me inasmuch as it was impossible to hear them more than two or three blocks away, but their notes are certainly very beautiful.

I wonder if you have any chiropractors in your midst yet? I don't ever remember hearing of them till I came here; but they seem to be doing a flourishing business in this city. For the information of the uninitiated chiropractors are a class of healing agents who teach that all human ills come from some section of the vertebrae being out of position. Their treatment consists chiefly in pressing or hammering the spine. There is much jealousy on the part of the medical profession as these folks have achieved a very wide popularity, and are credited with some remarkable "cures." Last week one of them treated a woman suffering from tuberculosis, and she died in half an hour, whereas it would take a regular medical man a hundred times as long. Perhaps such speed on the part of the chiropractor was the cause of an extra outburst of jealousy, anyhow the chiropractor was arrested and his trial is still going on. An attempt was made to incorporate the college of chiropractors in the Provincial Legislature last week, but the bill met with a complete defeat.

Our old friend Conan Doyle is here at present—at least those of us who knew and loved Sherlock Holmes know the novelist, Conan Doyle better than the spiritualist, Sir Conan Doyle, with a bee in his bonnet. I have not attended any of his lectures, nor propose to do so, for while I have not a fool in these days of ether waves who would deny the possibilities of spiritualism Doyle seems to have lost any sane common sense that he once had, and is largely a "sucker" for "mediums" and such.

Speaking of ether waves, there is quite a fad for wireless telephony in this city, and hundreds of folks are interested in aerials and such. The Toronto Star has been broadcasting a series of wireless concerts recently, and these have afforded much pleasure to the numbers of people who are equipped with receiving sets. Philadelphia, in U.S.A., sends out similar concerts, but as it needs a more elaborate outfit, the Star Concerts are given from a central broadcasting station, and are reproduced at two or three other centres, where the audience listens to the sounds as they emanate from a big horn on the stage. The effect is a bit weird, but it is very wonderful, and the various numbers are most distinctly rendered. In addition hundreds of amateurs at home tune up their sets and the whole family listens in, while the set is extra good the whole performance can be heard quite distinctly by just laying the receivers on the table. Wireless telephony can be just

"IF WOMEN ONLY KNEW" RECEIVED WITH ENTHUSIASM AT MAJESTIC THEATRE—R.O. RELEASE.

There is a good story, good settings and a good cast in "If Women Only Knew," the new Robertson-Cole release, at the Majestic to-day. It is a story of the pure and unselfish love of a good woman and the shallow and selfish affection of a frivolous girl. Maurice Travers who is the son of a widow of scanty means, thinks more of his prowess on the athletic field than he does of his studies. Living with Maurice, and his mother is Mabel Marshall, the orphan daughter of a close friend of Mrs. Travers. Madeline loves Maurice, but keeps the fact a secret.

Maurice does not pass his final mathematical examinations and is not graduated. He fears to tell his mother for fear it will break her heart. At the moment he finds consolation in the friendship of Donna Wayne, daughter of a wealthy trustee of the University. They are infatuated with each other and when Maurice proposes an elopement and marriage, Donna readily agrees. After the wedding Donna's father finds that she has been deceived and Maurice has difficulty in finding work. Donna becomes pensive and her selfish disposition begins to assert itself. Mrs. Travers is injured and Madeline stands by and nurses her. Maurice visits his mother, and upon returning to his wife finds her about to run away with Billy Thomas, a wealthy student. Maurice sets out to make good in the business world and succeeds.

Eventually Maurice returns home and finds that his wife has divorced him. His mother has died and he hears that Madeline is engaged to be married. He is about to leave town when he meets Madeline. Here is where the picture takes a corking twist and you have got to see it to appreciate—adv.

PUT AN END TO HER 40 YEARS OF SUFFERING

Seems Wonderful That Tanlac Gave Her The Longed For Relief From Stubborn Stomach Trouble, Declares Mrs. Awalt.

After suffering forty years it seems wonderful that a few bottles of Tanlac have given me the longed for relief," said Mrs. Ellen Awalt, highly esteemed resident of 14 Harris St., Halifax, N.S.

"In all these years there was scarcely a day my stomach did not give me trouble. Twenty years ago my kidneys began bothering me, then nine years ago I underwent an operation. Since then I have had no appetite, and although I was careful of my food I suffered badly from gas, palpitation of the heart, and inability to get restful sleep.

At first I could only take small doses of Tanlac but soon I began to get better. Now I am eating anything and my kidneys have ceased to bother me. I just want to tell everybody about Tanlac."

Tanlac is sold by all good druggists.

Obituary.

MRS. CHARLES P. AYRE.

Shortly before midnight on Friday last at "Burn Brae," Waterford Bridge Road, Mrs. Charles P. Ayre passed within the veil after a prolonged illness. The late Mrs. Ayre, nee Diana Stevenson, was the daughter of the late Rev. Thos. Stevenson, of Edinburgh, in which city she was married in 1838 to the youngest son of the late Hon. C. R. Ayre. Her work during the war will never be forgotten. No duty was too generous, no service too exalting. Plunged into personal grief through the death at Beaumont Hamel, of her gallant son Wilfred D. Ayre, 2nd Lieut. in the Royal Newfoundland Regiment, she abated not a whit her manifold efforts, increasing rather than decreasing them, as though seeking for solace in increased activity. Many a sailor and soldier owes a personal debt to Mrs. Ayre, of which, probably, he has no knowledge, for hers was that form of service that neither courted publicity, nor desired it. When in December 1917, the overworked system collapsed, and compelled her withdrawal from the activities she loved, the magnitude of the loss was realized both by the public and her co-workers. Since then she has been patiently waiting the summons, which for her meant reunion, as well as separation. On Thursday afternoon paralysis supervened and thirty hours later she passed peacefully away, at the age of 56 years. Amongst Mrs. Ayre's many war activities were the Soldier's and Sailors Club, the Jensen Camp and the Ladies' Welcoming Committee for returned soldiers and sailors. She was also in charge of the Spangnum Moss Work at Government House until her illness. For several years Mrs. Ayre was the esteemed Secretary of the Ladies' Current Events Club. Left to mourn their irreparable loss are her husband, two daughters, Isabelle, wife of Dr. Boyd Campbell, of Belfast, and Miss Dorothy Ayre who returned after a brief absence, by the S. S. Sackem; and one son, Ronald H. Ayre, M. C., B. A., now of London, and formerly of the Royal Air Force, who is expected to visit here in the month of June. In their sorrow, husband and children will have the sincere sympathy of friends including the boys of Reserve and Regiment, whose welfare was her constant thought and effort from the days of Pleasantville to the time when the hand of affliction prevented.

The funeral took place this, Monday, afternoon at 3 o'clock from "Burn Brae."

A Duty Performed.

Editor Evening Telegram

Dear Sir—Kindly allow space in your paper to say that I feel it my duty as one who has to answer to the call of the 20,000 people of the country, who are daily if anything is going to be done with the prohibition bill now in the hands of the government. Since my last letter I have interviewed the leader of the government and he promised me his full support when the bill comes before the House. Also I may say the leader of the Opposition is also with me on the matter. Now I call on the government to bring in this bill as is their duty to the people. I would also ask the members for Trinity District to get busy. Will the Hon. W. W. Halliday say what he is going to do with the 20,000 voters who are asking that something be done for them. Referring to the bill I may say you cannot get anything that will suit the country better, because it gives equal rights to all, and special favors to none. It is what the people want and what they are asking for.

Yours truly
WILLIAM FRENCH,
Chairman Moderate Prohibition Com.
May 8, 1922.
