He claims damages on the ground of loss of his position as organist of the First Methodist Church, loss of pupils, and loss of reputation. Mr. Murch denies having made the alleged statement.

A Study for Dairymen.

Cheese makers have known for years that foul water would play sad havec with the milk, causing floating curds and tainted cheese. Yet with all their preaching there were always a host of patrons who either did not care or else were perfectly indifferent as to what water their cows drank. But here is a leason that relates to the life ent as to what water their cows drank. But here is a lesson that relates to the life of the cattle themselves. It will be a profitable thing to read and remember, for it teaches a very important principle in cow management, viz., the imperative value and necessity of providing pure water for the stock.

In a recens bulletir of the Iowa Experimental Station, D. M. Stalker, veterinarian of the statior gives the following interesting account of an outbreak of mallignant diseases among live stock:

"During the latter part of the summer of 1890, I had occasion to investigate a severe outbreak of diseases on a farm in one of the counties in Iowa. The animals, including horres, cattle and pigs, were all affected in the same way. The local symptoms were largely confined to the throat. There was a swelling, partial paralysis of the walls of the upper air passages and painful and difficult breathing. The animals attacked uniformly died after an illness of about two days. The disease I could not recognize as belonging to any of the well-defined types with which I was acquainted. Here were horses, cattle and pigs sick and dying with disease, showing the same symptoms in all. There are few, if any, of the specific forms of disease that spread as epizootic from the widely differing species of domestic animals. I could not classify the disease, and at once set about the task of discovering, if possible, some common source of exposure. the widely differing species of domestic animals. I could not classify the disease, and at once set about the task of discovering, if possible, some common source of exposure. The pastures, buildings and water supply were each in turn subjected to careful scrutiny. The buildings were such as are to be found no ordinary lows farms, fairly comfortable and clean. I could find no clue the quantity or quality of feed that promised to lead to assolution of the difficulty. On investigation of the water supply, I found that most of the animals on the farm drank from a small creek that ran a zigzag course through the premises. The stream was in part supplied from a series of springs and in ordinary secsons afforded a fair amount of water which ran at least for a portion of its course, over a gravelly bed. The present dry summer, with several previous ones, showing an choromally light rain-fall, has so reduced the amount of water, that it has ceased to run. On making examination and conducting inquiries, I ascertained that it had been the custom on the farm to throw carcasses of animals down the steep bluffs into the bed of the stream.

Ifurther learned that during the summer chicken cholera had prevailed on the farm and that a large number of chickens had died and been thrown over the bank. I was also informed that the hog cholera has caused the death of a considerable number of swine, the carcasses having been treated in a similar manner. The several yards occupied by horses, cattle, pigs and barn yard fowls, were on the hillside with abrupt almages on the ground of less of nis position as organist of the First Methodist Church, loss of pupils, and loss of reputation. Mr. Murch denies having made the alleged statement.

The woman, it is understood, was married to the defendant some six or seven years ago, but the plaintiff claims that if she is Mrs. Holden she was previously Mrs. Donnelly, and she was rever legally relieved of the bonds which bound her to him.

Ladies and Gentlemen.—It is not in compliance with solicitations and requests of a large number of the electors of the electoral district of London or elsewhere, that we now call your attention to the fact that at no time in the history of Canada is bile, indigestion, sore throats and sore heads, more rife than during an election campaign. All the foregoing complaints and many others to which flesh is heir, can be quickly cured by taking "Curative Fluid" internally, and using "Curative Absorbent Externally. They are absolute specifics for the cure of disease, neutralizing the acid which is nearly always the cause of inflammation. By removing the inflammation the disease ceases to exist.
