threatens this unfortunate island. Every day the situation is becoming more desperate, owing to the fact that throughout the island the state of war prevents any attention being paid to the crops. In the towns which are besieged by the insurgents the situation is much worse than it is in the country districts. In Heraklion alone, where there has been a very large in- of all civil service salaries has been flux of refugees, the outlook is very serious. There are now in the town, counting the regular Moslem population and the refugees, fully 25,000 persons. Provisions are very scarce, and a famine is imminent. Large and a famine is imminent. Large numbers of the refugees are already dying of starvation, and it was the knowledge of this fact that led Korakos, the Greek leader, to issue his order permitting the cultivation of the fields near the town. The lines of the besiegers are absolutely impassable, as has been proved by the failure of the several sorties made. The officials of the town of Heraklion have telegraphed imploring the aid of the foreign warships in rais ing the siege.
