Absence of Bishop and Archdeacon He "Read Himself In."

Rev. T. B. Clark, the newly-appointed rector of All Saints' Church, occupied the pulpit of the Hamilton road edifice at both services yesterday. It was his first Sunday as the head of this growing parish, and following the ancient custom of the church he read the 39 articles of the Christian faith at the morning service. The duty of "reading in" a new rector devolves upon the shop or archdeacon of a diocese, but as both the Bishop of Huron and Archdeacon Davis were unable to attend at All Saints' yesterday, the work had to be done by Mr. Clark himself.  In the evening, the new rector referred in grateful terms to the action of th congregation in inviting him to the rectorship and in outlining the plan of as having taken part in the recent work he would pursue, he said his chief object at all times would be to do that ducted the services at the Memorial which would be of the most service to Church yesterday.
