We must fight this thing or varied. We must fight this thing through, but we must have additional power. Personally, I have never yet been accused of being faint-hearted in the House, or afraid to grapple with the issues, and I believe that the people, while realizing that we make mistakes like all others, will support us again at the next election. I am not saying there will be one. The Opposition, I don't think is so inclined, but when it comes I believe that we will have the backing of not only the Farmers and Labor, but the citizens Farmers and Labor, but the citizens generally. Because no one can accuse us of class legislation. We will be ap-pealing to all, not any one class." (The premier was well received).

Tells of Highways. "We have what we call a compre-hensive road system," explained Hon. F. C. Biggs, following his opening remarks. "A system that will relieve to a great degree the burden of the bigger highways. We admit that we have spent considerable, but you must stop and realize that the number of cars in the province have increase 500 times over. There are veritable engines of destruction as far as the roads are concerned. Our main question is to administer within reason our expenditure fairly throughout the province. Wherever possible we are following out cur plan of using local material, thereby saving enormously."

The minister of public works explained that he would like to talk longer only the premier had yet to speak and the situation had already been fairly well covered by the preceding speakers.

"They have accused us of class legis-lation," declared John Lethbridge, M.P. P., West Middlesex. "But I believe that our record of the past two sessions shows different. You'll notice also that our critics accuse us of extravagance but they do not do this when they are in the House.
