Attitude Towards Women.

It is the fashion of some men to speak lightly of women and womanhood; and young men in their susceptible years are sometimes apt to listen to these low standards, and inclined to accept them or be influenced by them. But of one thing every young fellow may be assured; that the man who speaks of women in any but the most respectful terms is either a knave or a fool-very often he is both And this is one of the few rules in life to which there is no exception. Young men should more closely associate their mothers that every slur cast upon women as a sex is a slur upon their mothers.

There is no influence to be compared with that of a good woman over the life of a young man. It means everything to him, his success in every phase of life. Men are by nature course and brutal; it is the influence of women which softens them. But no influence is productive of the best and surest results unless we make ourselves susceptible to it. If we lack faith in women, if we fail in the right ideal of womanhood, all her influence will be as naught upon us. From the beginning of the world woman has been man's leader. She has made him what he is to-day. All the qualities which we admire in men come from woman's influence. And a young man starting out in life cannot trust to an influence so sure and so safe as that which comes to him from the being whose life is a part, or in whose life he finds a supreme place. Man's best friend is the woman who loves him. That should be the faith of every young man toward women that should be his absolute conviction, and he should show it by an attitude for respect and deference towardsher.

disrespectful. Clothes do not necessarily describe that will impress the Imperial Capital. The site to be acquired is "The Island," in the Strand on which now stand the Aldwych Mansions and the Gaiety Theatre. The location is the most public in the world. Situated near Temple Bar, close to the point where the Strand, Fleet street and the King's Way come together, the Commonwealth offices will be in the very centre of the busiest street traffic to be found anywhere on earth. Australia certainly is going to bid for British population and British markets. C Perhaps it will be necessary The Government of Australia has for the Canadian Government to move its offices out of Victoria street into a more prominent down-town position. The Ontario Government building erected by the Whitney Government is on the Strand, just across the way from the proposed Australian headquarters. It may be possible for the Federal and Provincial Governments of this country, by uniting their forces, to secure a building at the heart of the Empire that will be a credit to the Domin-

The Artistic at Niagara.

The United States government, Canada and the state of New York are co-operating to beautify the landscape at Niagara Falls and prevent utilitarian ideas from defacing this most popular and world-famed piece of American scenery. The industrial power plants are now planting shrubs and laying out walks with a view to beautifying their grounds. Some of them are spending very large sums in this work of beautifica-

This is as it should be. Neither the Canadian or the American government should be willing to permit the gigantic utility corporations to utilize the power of Niagara in a way to destroy its scenic beauty and grandeur. It is being discovered that the power can be utilized without this ruthless disregard of the artistic value of the place. Power companies are freely and gladly entering into this work of preservation or artistic conservation, and already great results are being accomplished. One firm has expended something like a million dollars in beautification, the effort being to preserve the natural effect rather than supplant it with that which is artificial and out of harmony with the surroundings.

Sir James Whitney at Alvinston.

noon and to night.

When the train pulled in at 3.30 there was a cheering crowd that, included all the school children, each of whom carried a little Union Jack. To the cheers ried a little Union Jack. To the cheers and waving flags the prime minister acknowledged his thanks, the inclement weather preventing any lengthy speech. To-night the premier was escorted by the Inwood band and a procession of citizens from his private car to the opera house, where the meeting was held. There was most marked enthusiasm, to which Sir James responded by as rousing a speech as he has delivered on his present tour. The opera house was prettily decorated The opera house was prettily decorated with flags and bunting.

Courtship in Sardinia.

Wooing is a slightly more complicated matter in Sardinia than it is here, says the Gentlewoman. The marriage customs are very curious. If the father has a marriageable daughter the would-be suitor applies to him for permission to see her as she goes to church, or in the event of her not wishing to be seen he communicates with her by means of a species of telephone, which has been in use since time immemorial. It is a long string with a wooden knob at each end. use since time immemorial. It is a long string with a wooden knob at each end. The father's permission having been given, the lady drops one end out of the window and, the shutters being closed, places the other knob to her ear, while down below her would-be-lover pours his protestations into the knob she has thrown into the street. Sometimes this consistence form of corrections and the street. curious form of courtship continues for two or three years, the man never seeing the face of his innamorato.

Lady Morell Mackenzie, widow of Sir Morell Mackenzie, wrote in her will—
"When I die, I hope my children will wear as little black as possible. White or mauve I like, but not black. And I hope they will not shut themselves up, but go out among their friends, and to places of amusement. I am not afraid of them forgetting me, and I want them to be happy." This gives expression to the modern view. The heavy mourning, including the widow's weeds, seems to be passing away. Nor is the change at all disrespectful. Clothes do not necessarily describe the sentiments.

Poverty Saved Burns.

Burns, it will be remembered, was on the eve of leaving Scotland for Jamaica when the publication of his poems made him famous and kept him at home, Lord Rosebery has exercised his imagination as to what might have happened had Burns carried out his original intention, and believes that amid the tropical luxuriance of Jamaica and tre degrading conditions of slavery, together with the convivial associations of the island, the poet would have degenerated into a totally different Burns. His genius could hardly have survived the luxury of wealth. Poverty produced masterpieces, but wealth smothered them. We can, Lord Rosebery declares, count on our fingers all the masterpieces produced by rich people.

In our hearing a man said the other day: "Thin men can run faster, jump higher, "holler" louder, sleep sounder, swim easier, eat longer, dive deeper, keep cooler, see further, dodge quicker, drink more and live longer than any fat man living." Now do you want to be fat?

The young man talked for ten or fifteen minutes steady, explaining why he had missed his appointment with her, when the girl at the other end of the wire interrupted. "Just a moment Guy!" she said. "What is it, Freda?" "I want to change the receiver to the other ear. This one's tired."
