-The electorate of Nova Scotia named its servants, for the conduct of the great genera interests of the province for the next five years, yesterday, with no uncertain sound. From the very opening of the campaign i was apparent that the Conservatives con are sharply and perhaps foolishly defined We are told that yesterday's election wa run on Dominion political lines, and it was but who in the whole constituency will ver ture to furnish a sufficient reason for th character of the contest. This party div sion, more than anything else, is the barrier that prevents our people from enjoying the full benefits of a truly representative adminernment of to-day falls far short of the ideal, because it is political before everything else, and politics and genuine public interests do not often go hand in hand. The province assembly above all things, and if by some miracle party names and principles could be sunk, and candidates elected on the strength of their integrity and business ability, the social and industrial conditions of the province would better promoted than under the existing regime.

there is practically only one party now and we are not prepared to say that an opposition is necessary to keep it on its best behavior The record of the next few years work will be the measure of its ability to plan and perform for the general good. The roneness of members of the legislature to orget that they are the people's servants, except at election time, is one of their worst faults. They receive remuneration for their ervices from Tory and Liberal alike, but the records of parliament impeach the onesty of very many of them in accepting their wage from the people, and working not for the people but for the party. The Liberal majority is now so large that the men elected by party can afford to give the the next election perhaps the electorate will have grown wise enough to refuse to recognize the value of a man's politics in compari son with his real ability, and will proceed to elect a parliament which will be neither Liberal nor Conservative, but made up of men who will devote the best of their time and energies to fulfilling the duties of their responsible positions.

and the question is one that, we believe, will enter strongly into the ultimate scheme for developing the public highways in accordance with their true importance in the advance of social and business interests of a country. In the United States it was estimated that from able bodied inmates of the prisons of that country thirty-six million days' work might be obtained in each year to this end, and this from a class whose labors now produce no material or economic result. now produce no material or economic result. In fact, prison labor as at present utilized enters into competition with free working. Set this army of men at work at road making, or preparing material for the highways, and instead of remaining idle charges upon the public treasury, they would be working to the direct, practical advantage of the country. The situation in Canada is similar to that in the United States, though fortunately our prison army is not even proportionately so large as that of the Republic. There are many hundreds of law breakers in our prisons
These requirements alone Arthur Hood, Independent. who are punished by confinement alone, while the country is levied upon for their | majorities support. The situation is hardly a fair one for the law-abiding taxpayer to face, inasidleness within a wholesome prison to working for a living among wage earners. If the prisoners were brought forth each day from H. S. LeBlanc. our county jails and penitentiaries, and set to work on our public roads system, they would receive the punishment for their misthe people to be kept in idleness while honest average crop, but the results of fruit gatheraverage crop, but the results of trutt gathering up to this time show that this estimate is far too meagre. The fact that a perhaps hitherto unequalled percentage of the fruit is marketable is responsible for the pleasant disappointment that orchardists are meeting is marketable is responsible for the pleasant disappointment that orchardists are meeting with. Better fruit never was marketed than the orchards of this great fruit belt will produce this year, and the prospects for selling on a strong market never were better. Shippers are everywhere buyers, and there is no hesitation in offering in the orchard prices that are practically double the results of last year's sales. The average grower, who is offered a good price for his fruit by the local buyers, surrenders his holdings, but the number of producing shippers is on the increase, and a growing disposition is manifest among the farmers to take their chances in the London sales rather than be governed having been a deacon of the First Baptist church there for several years. He leaves a widow, who was formerly Miss Margaret by the caprices of speculators, who are satisfied with a shipper's commission in an off year, but are anxious investors when a good trading prospect is in sight. If the producer is compelled to ship in a poor year, he will soon become independent enough to ship for the maximum profit in a good year. The day is not far hence when fruit growers will realize the importance of their industry and effect some combination of interests that will enable them to market their produce were connected with the reservoir to retard the accumulation of addiment in the basin. The town please will enable them to market their produce without having to pay the profits of the shipper or middleman and an exorbitant freight tariff before they can estimate their power and effect some combination of interests that following twenty-four hours, but it has settled now and the town is once more enjoying good water and plenty of it.

have no sufficient claim on the sympathy of the people to be kept in idleness while honest men suffer for their misdeeds and labor for their support. As instruments of working out a reform in the public highways, the prison army could be made to accomplish much, but if not employed at this work they should be required to perform some other labor to keep them in touch with industry. As road builders, they would save a large amount of the money that is now expended on roads, and in their work would not interfere with free wage earners.

—The Valley farmers are now gathering their orchard harvest, and the majority of them have the satisfaction of finding that this year the actual count of barrelled fruit exceeds their most sanguine estimates. In the government reports, apples have been marked as about seventy-five per cent. of an average crop, but the results of fruit gather.
