

those in trouble should always find in him a sympathizing friend and wise counsellor.

A student himself, he should strive to secure thorough preparation of work on the part of teachers and scholars. By personal talks with teachers and in the teachers' meeting, he can seek to persuade them, not only to prepare the lesson so as to dispense with all Helps during the teaching hour, but also to memorize at home and recite in class whatever their classes are asked to memorize and recite. It seems to me that such preparation by superintendent and teachers is the best, if not the only remedy, for the evil of non-preparation by scholars.

I have mentioned some things which the superintendent ought to do outside of school. It should be remembered, however, that successful leadership depends more upon what a man is than upon what he does. The superintendent's personality is a mighty factor, and it is perhaps mightier out of school than in it.
