Written for The Post and True WITNESS.) THE DEATHLESS DEAD.

Like a mighty wave from a troubled past
They come, and surging fill
The hallowed ways that memory lights
By many a vale and hill. Their forms start; their weapons gleam Where Liberty hath bled; And countless heroes join the ranks Of Ireland's deathless dead.

Bright in the sun their armours flash;
Their banners mock the wind,
Upon the Plains of Abraham
The dead new comrades find;
Away from the walls of old Quebec
To where Niagara's wave
Unto the dead, at Lundy's Lane,
A thundering requiem gave. A thundering requiem gave.

The gory field of Lexington,
Hath heard their manly shout,
When fighting 'neath the "Stars and Stripes," They put the foc to rout; Neath Corcoran, Meagher, Shoridan, By many a hero led, From sea and land they join the ranks Of Iroland's deathless dead,

Far from their native land they sleep At From their native land they sleep
At Seven Pines o'er the wave,
Or, deep beneath the soil of Maine,
They found a soldier's grave.
For Liberty's cause, their cannons boomed;
And Fame's bright annals teach,
That Erin's sons in battle's tide
Flow in to fill the breach.

And in the shadowy ranks we find Soldiers of worth and might, Who wielded not the sword of strife. They died in dark oppression's hour—Crushed by the tyrant's heel;
Their words, and deeds, like germs of hope, Down in the heart we feel.

Far in the West the dying sun Her gaudy halls adorn, And und a deepening sea of gold. The gathering shades are born. The gathering snades are county
Before the hight the vision fades,
By straggling moonbeams led,
The soldiers seek the honored rest
Of Ireland's deathless dead,

To make rhuberb jelly, take some rhuberb wipe it with a clean wet cloth, peel it and cut it into pieces an inch long. To each pound of rhuberb add three quarters of a pound of white sugar. Put it to boil for about ten minutes, or until the juice is well drawn. Strain it into a preserving pan, let it boil quickly until it clings to the spoon, skim it and put it into jum pots or molds. The quickest way to know if it will set is to drop a little on a plate to cool.

Very tender asparagus makes a delicious garnish.
