SHADOWS OF OLD PARIS.

By G. DUVAL.

Fully Illustrated by J. Gavin, in colour, wash, and line drawings.
Crown 8vo, 12s. 6d. net; by post 13s.

"Among the crowds of idlers and pleasure seekers, of students even, who make the French capital temporarily their home, there are few lovers of tradition curious enough to turn from the dazzling modern city of pleasure, and plunge into the dingy Paris of the past. Itself a town within a town. . . . The whole story of France is written on the walls of Paris; and to a student of history, what is more passionately eloquent, what more enigmatic and mysterious, than those silent stones?"

BURGUNDY: THE SPLENDID DUCHY.

By PERCY ALLEN.

Fully Illustrated with eight water-colour and 86 line drawings by Miss Marjorie Nash. Foolscap quarto, cloth, 12s. 6d. net.

BURGUNDY, though quite unknown to the majority of travellers, is one of the most interesting provinces of France. This full-blooded land of fertile meadows, vine-clad slopes, and rugged hills, is the home of a people strong and vivacious—comfortable, courageous, eloquent, sonorous folk, that like a good dinner and a good story to follow, that have produced Bernard, Bossuet, Greuze, and Lamartine.

Burgundian history, too, is unrivalled in its interest for English readers. It was the scene of events vital to the making of Europe. It was one of the strongholds of Roman civilization. It saw the genesis of a religious movement that was the greatest feature of the eleventh and twelfth century history.

In this, his latest book, Mr. Allen gives us all that an intelligent traveller need know concerning the southern portion of the great Duchy, a province that has not previously been adequately dealt with by an English writer. Miss Marjorie Nash's drawings, in colour and black and white, worthily complete a volume that should form a welcome addition to the library of French Travel.
