EDNA MAY'S FAREWELL

LONDON, April 28.—Edna May, who gained a peculiar hold on the hearts of theatregoers here when she appeared as the "Salvation lass" in "The Belle of New York," a decade ago, was given a great demonstration to-night on the occasion of her last appearance on the stage, which she has abandoned to marry young Oscar Lewison.

Her admirers have sent thousands of requests for souvenirs and photographs since her approaching retirement was announced, and a line of "gallery gods" to-day waited before the theatre from early morning for seats.

Miss May has been presenting "Nelly Nell" to large and enthusiastic audiences at the Aldwych Theatre, and on every appearance she has been greeted with round after round of ap-

MY PICTURES.

By Meribah Abbott.

Some one gave me a picture—
A little glimpse of the sea,
Cliff and surf and a gull in-wing—
I smell the salt and I feel the swing:
How it comes back to me!
Rhythm of wave, and gleam of sand,
And white sail rounding the point of land.

Some one gave me a picture—
A bit of the world in a rolling
Tangle of flower and fern and vines,
Under the shade of the purple pines:
Oh, to be there again!
There, where the ground-thrush hides
her nest,
And the wild red strawberries ripen best.

So, pain-bound and helpless
I lie and dream all day,
For as good, and the world is wide,
Sun and sea and the dancing tide.
An air ship in the boy's
These are mine, and the music of June
Sings my heart, to the thrush's tune!

"We Begin This Thing."

She is a well-known Canadian author, and she laughed as she said:
"You know I'm always so scared when I find me out. When they tell me I'm clever, or faster in any way, I think, oh! if I should ever be discovered!"

"It reminds me of my little daughter. One time I had her away with me on a trip. The one despair of her life was that her hair was straight and she bewailed its straightness at all times and seasons."

"So I curled her hair with the hons for the first time, and she was very jubilant, and she was very jubilant."

"But in the morning the curl had departed. Not a vestige of it remained. You like that, up in bed and declared, 'Mother, you have to curl my hair before breakfast!'"

"I can't, child! We will be late for breakfast now!"

"I don't care," she said, stubbornly, "you began this thing. You curled my hair for those people last night!"

1856—Infant's One-Piece Princess Petticoat.
Paris Pattern No. 1856.
All Seams Allowed.

Everything in clothes nowadays is princess in general contour and likewise the baby's attire partakes of this general feature. This dainty little petticoat fits snugly to the tiny figure and forms the right sort of an undergarment under the more elaborate dress. A deep ruffle at the lower edge lengthens the petticoat, and may be made dainty with Valenciennes edging.

The pattern is in one size. To make the petticoat requires 2-1/2 yards of goods 27 inches wide, or 2-1/4 yards 36 inches wide; 2-1/2 yards of beading and 5 yards of edging to trim.

Price of pattern—10 cents.

The World's Serial Story.

Buchanan's Wife

"Oh, God!" she cried, in her agony. "God, if you will hear me still, if you're not turned from me quite, help me now! I have done a very terrible sin—love's sake—and I deserve punishment, but do not punish me now! Afterwards, when I'm dead, do what you like with me; I shan't beg off. I shan't shrink. But do not punish me now. Help me to keep this dreadful thing from Harry Faring. Help me to make his life happy. Help me to hide from him, somehow, what must be hidden. Help me to lie and pretend and make believe so long as Harry lives. Then you may torture me forever if you want to. Show me a way to prevent this horror from reaching him. That's all I want. I want his life to be beautiful. Oh, God, if there's any kindness or goodness or mercy in You, You'll do this thing for me—I mean for Harry. Harry has been blameless. Do not let my sin cloud his life. Show me a way. Show me a way."

II.

THE ROOM OF THE OLD GODS

She saw no more of Buchanan that day. For she remained in-doors, locked in her room chamber, all the afternoon and evening, taking no food, repulsing the anxious, kindly maid who came from hour to hour to knock at the door.

And the God to whom she prayed so desperately hid about—would send her no sign, show her no way.

"He'll leave none of me," she said to herself at nightfall. "He's done with me. He will not hear." Then she shut her teeth and prayed again, almost with threats.

"You've got to help!" she said fiercely. "You've got to let me save myself. You've got to let me save Harry Faring. If you don't, I shall know that all the talk about 'mercy' and 'forgiveness' and 'long suffering' in lies, lies, lies! Harry Faring has done nothing to You. You shan't punish him for what I've done!"

At some late hour of the night she fell into an uneasy sleep, crouching in a nook beside a window, and, after evil dreams, awakened in the gray of the morning, white, hollow-eyed, unrefreshed.

And God still held aloof.

When her breakfast word came from the old Scots gardener that he wished to speak to her. She had him brought in, and the man's sour face was crimson with wrath.

"Ye maun-ris me o' yon doddler!" said he, "but I'll be bursed for ye."

"What's that?" she asked. "The Lord may ha' made the purr loon witless, an' for that I hae peety, but the Lord or summat else has made him maledicious as well. He's just past bearin'." I canna' ha' m' amang my posties. Ye'll hae ta' cast him out the gate."

"I will come out presently," she said. "Do nothing until I come. Only what must not be hard upon this poor man. He is not himself." And she gave a little, bitter, wry smile at the phrase. He was not himself indeed.

When she went into the garden later neither the old Scotsman nor the wreck of Herbert Buchanan was in sight. She walked down past the roses and past the heavy bulk, she walked and heaved and walked where old-fashioned flowers grew in an orderly tangle. Here she came upon a great watering-pot set heedlessly down, on its handle, upon a bed of spice-pinks. The odorous little blossoms were crushed flat under the heavy bulk, she gave a cry of angry protest, and dugged the thing out into the gravel-path.

The Russian hound came whining and barked joyfully to meet her. The beast was as evidently hurt in feelings, if not in body, as a human being could have

No extra papers will be printed for sale of coupons contained therein.

If you have any complaints to make kindly send them to The Toronto World Trip to London Editor. We want everybody to be satisfied.

A woman's home is where she eats and sleeps; a woman living and working in Toronto, but claiming residence elsewhere, must be entered in District No. 1.

It is easier to answer questions than to correct a mistake. Do not hesitate to ask questions that you want answered.

Be sure that you receive a receipt for all coupons left at the office. If you do not they will not be counted.

Any further information desired may be obtained by calling at The World Office, or by calling telephone Main 252 and asking for the Trip to London Editor.

Once entered, do not drop out.

Candidates may call on us at any time. We welcome you. Don't lose any votes. Watch the expiration dates on your ballots.

SPECIAL BALLOTS—The same instructions apply to the special ballots issued for paid-in-advance subscriptions.

USE YOUR FRIENDS—Hundreds of people have no personal friends in this contest. They are friends of your friends or of your friends' friends. If you have your friends working hard enough for you thousands of votes can be gathered in from just such people.

Ballot the interest of your friends and friends' friends. Use your telephone. If you have friends in other districts write them letters. If you learn of any persons who are not World readers—secure their subscription whether you know them or not. Work for special ballots, they count the most. Ask your political friends to furnish ideas. They know how to cover the field.

Special order blanks for subscriptions can be secured from The Toronto World Trip to London Editor. If you belong to a church let your church friends know you are running.

HOW TO GET VOTES—If you belong to any organization let your fellow members know you are in the race.

Don't knock the other candidates. Remember the Golden Rule. Don't forget that children can do the most effective work in collecting coupons. Every little helps.

Should your father, brother or friends belong to any organizations, get them to work for you.

Do not let a day pass without casting a ballot. Success is the reward of persistency.

Cast your coupons in as large numbers as possible—this will save you time and trouble.
