MITCHELTREE EXCELS IN FIRST RECITAL SINCE BAN LIFTED

ston and A. D. Jordan Share Honors.

All circumstances combined last night to make the annual recital given by Thomas G. Mitcheltree in Cronyn Hall a brilliant success, an event that will long prove a happy memory for the many who attended.

many who attended.

It was London's first musical event after the close of the war, and so near to the proclamation of peace that people attended in the festive spirit which bubbled over from the day before. There was for everyone a sense of relaxation and responsiveness to enjoyment offered unknown for four long, weary years and three months of war.

In the second place, it was the first entertainment after the ban due to the epidemic had been lifted, sufficient reason in itself to make pleasure particularly keen. Third, and of supreme importance on an occasion of the kind, four of London's favorite and best equipped artists, were appearing in a four of London's favorite and best equipped artists were appearing in a program of exceptional musical merit, built up with a fine feeling for concert architecture. The planist-composer was happy in having as his assistants Luta Laymon, contralto; Florence Eggleston.

Laymon, contraits; Fjorence Eggleston, violinist, and A. D. Jordan, accompanist.

In Splendid Form.

Mr. Mitcheltree was in splendid form last night, his technique never more clean cut, flexible and fluent, the tone at mand, varying from an ethereal the Polonaise Militaire (Chopin).

Nobody is too old to love a well-told story. That is probably one of the chief reasons why Thomas G. Mitcheltree's playing affords such pleasure to listeners of all degrees of musical knowledge. He makes the plano tell stories, now a story of a stately dance through which disputed figures. now a story of a stately dance through which dignified figures move; anon, the picture changes, and night of velvetv blackness, with glittering stars, appears. Now it is the lady of the golden locks who industriously spins as golden locks who industriously spins as she dreams of the cavalier who has gone to the war, and sings as she dreams to the accompaniment of the whirr of the wheel. Next it is the excitement, dash and colorfulness of the hunt, which sweeps close, then recedes into the distance. Now it is a carnival half, all beauty, color, gay lights, perfume of flowers, and the heartbeats reported in the righthm of the waltz. By tume of flowers, and the heartbeats re-beated in the rhythm of the waltz. By the magic of tone the story of Schu-pert's "Erl King" is told with grip-bingly dramatic effect as elaborated in the difficult transcription of Liszt.

Three Stood Out.

Recalling the plane numbers of last night three stand out with special prominence, first, the Littoff "Spinning Song," played with beautifully sustained song, now in one hand, now in the other, and, alternately, in left hand and right, a gracefully flowing "imitative harmony" accompaniment.

Brilliant Conclusion the program as printed. There were tions, however, many of them ted encores in compliment not to the pianist, but to Miss Laymon Difference Here.

"I'd like to put in an authority on this case," said counsel.

"I don't know that this point has ever been decided, but you can put your authority in, and I will reserve the case for a week," declared the magistrate. Different stories were told by Harris and Constable Edward Proctor, who arrested him last Sunday morning on Ottaway avenue between Wellington and Waterloo streets. The cop, who was in plain clothes, stated that he asked Harris to to the besides and the statement of the statemen is to go to the police station with him ris to go to the police station with him to be searched and received in reply a couple of punches on the jaw and one in the eye. # VICTORY IS OURS!

Now For The Bonds

Now more than ever it is important that this Job be finished just as the big Job was finished over there.

Our heroes fought our fight to a glorious and triumphant finish. We have celebrated their victory---they are waiting now to celebrate ours.

Let it be another unconditional surrender, as every dollar will be needed by our Government.

Our boys over there are now watching us--their eyes are turned toward home. Let us speed their return by buying Victory Bonds.

How Many Bonds?

Just ask yourself this question today. How many Victory Bonds? Satisfy yourself while you have the opportunity that you have taken your proper quota, that you have done your duty for your country and for your boys.

A Gilt-Edge Investment

With the victory won and peace declared, 5 1=2 per cent Government Bonds (non-taxable) should be scrambled for. There should be a race to get them, not from the point of duty, but purely for the safest and most profitable money investment on the market today.

Buy every "Victory Bond" you can possibly pay for. Borrow the money and buy more "Victory Bonds."

We are the happiest people on earth today, and we will have the most prosperous country in the world, if every man and woman put their shoulders to the wheel and their money in action. That is what we need, "ACTION."
