THE ALEXANDER HAMILTON INSTITUTE

was established to do for the man ambitious to become a business executive what the technical school does for the engineering student, the law school for the law student, the medical college for the student of medicine. It specializes in no single business subject; it brings to its subscribers a broad workable knowledge of all departments of business—production, marketing, financing and accounting. The new course and service based on the present conditions of business is a real boon to the student. E. J. Dean, maritime representative, at Dufferin Hotel, April 8 to 13, will be glad to explain to you in detail, the systematic manner in which the institute's service is conducted.

One-fifth of Syracuse, N. Y., newspaper readers peruse the classified advertising section, according to merchants who have been quickly investigating the "pop advertisement" as a medium to attract patronage. The net result is the growth in the want advertisements carried in the local press. The student was given a treat in the holiday shopping season, and a careful check of the results showed that it was a gold mine for the advertiser.

Many of the smaller department store managers, who hitherto have considered it beneath their dignity to patronize the classified sections of the papers, have found this a new channel for their efforts to move stock. Frequently store managers have scattered a number of small advertisements in these sections, under various headings, with excellent results.

Those merchants who believe strongly in the classified section of a newspaper, declare that a good portion of a newspaper's clientele turns to this section first.
