

OVERCOATS THAT WILL LAST. Fabrics and workmanship that will "wear well" are not sufficient for the average man. For of what use is a perfectly good overcoat that is hopelessly out of style. Few extreme styles last more than one season. But there are correct conservative styles that vary little, if at all, from year to year.

PLAN TO BUY FARM FOR THE CAPTAIN OF GENERAL SLOCUM. He is 72 Years Old—New York Shipping Men Say He Was Made Scapagoat in Disaster Trial. New York, Nov. 14—Friends of Capt. William H. Van Schaick, commander of the steamer General Slocum, when also burned with a loss of 683 lives, are planning to buy a farm on which the aged man may spend the remainder of his life. The men interested in this are the prominent shipping men of the harbor, many of whom worked long for his release from Sing Sing. It is planned to raise $5,000 by popular subscription and with this sum buy a small farm near Amsterdam, N. Y. Capt. Van Schaick has always been a sailor and now, seventy-two years old, he is unable to follow his calling any longer. "There was no better steamboat master in these waters than Capt. Van Schaick," said Frederick B. Dainell, one of the principal leaders in a movement to provide for the captain in his old age. "He was always a careful man, and when the accident came which ended his career he stood bravely to his post to the last. He was betrayed in his trial and others took advantage of his ignorance of the law. He became the scape-goat. Now, we want to do something to make life easy for him and his faithful wife."
