WANT AMERICAN HORSES BARRED

Agitation on Foot to Allow Them to Come in, Vigorously Opposed by Local Horsemen.

Speaking of the attempt that is being made to allow American horses to compete at Provincial track meets, Fred Duncanson said last night that he was strongly opposed to it, as were many other owners. He said it was manifestly unfair to the men who own horses in the Province, as the American drivers can find out what horses there are available for the different classes and then hunt around for faster ones. As they have large stables to draw from they usually succeed in carrying off the bulk of the money.

Nearly all the Provincial tracks had decided to bar American horses this year, but an agitation to rescind this rule has lately developed among interested parties, and with a strong probability of success. Local horsemen will send a protest to all the different Associations in the Maritime Provinces to try and have this regulation adhered to.

Mr. Duncanson will move his string of horses to Moosepath today to begin active training. His stable includes Conroy, the free-for-aller, Laura Merrill and Etha Mac. Fred Fraser, of Sydney, has been engaged to drive for him this year.

ATTACKED BY WOLVES

Two Turner Lumber Company Employees Tired by Band

WORTHINGTON, Alberta, June 7—While Donald McDonald and August Nitz, land inspectors for the Turner Lumber Company, were carrying their camping outfit and canoe from a lumber camp to a small lake about a mile from the camp, they were attacked by a band of wolves. McDonald was travelling a few rods in advance of Nitz, seeing the danger, dropped the canoe and made his way up a tree, but his partner was not so lucky, and he had to face the pack, with nothing but a small axe. With this he succeeded in killing one of the savage animals, Nitz then seeing the danger, endeavored to attract their attention by taking off his coat and waving it in the air. This brought the whole pack down to Nitz, and gave McDonald a chance to make his way up a tree. Here they had to remain for several hours until the wolves gave up the watch. Then they came down and returned for their rifles and went in pursuit of the wolves. They succeeded in killing another wolf, and returned to camp with the two wolves, none the worse for their dangerous encounter.

PEARL INDUSTRY WAS EPHEMERAL

Arkansas Rivers Were Soon Cleaned Out

Illiterate Negro Family Baited, Bought Lard and Horses and Hired White Servants

The latest of all the chapters in the history of jewel hunting in the United States is that which tells the story of the rise and fall of the pearl seekers. No other is so picturesque, so crowded with human interest, so tragic. Fortunes were made, squandered, made again and usually lost again—and then came the end. "We have worked out the beds! The industry is killed!" In 1900 came the big strike on the Black River of Arkansas, and an old fisherman was the cause of it. He was fishing from a skiff, anchored in mid-stream, when his bait ran out. The excited fisherman got more than he wanted. He had picked up a few clams from the river bed. The first bivalve he brought up was an enormous one, with a pearl inside. He was so excited that he did not know what to do. He showed it to the other fishermen, who were all around him. They all wanted to see it. He held it out for them. They all reached for it. He was so excited that he did not know what to do. He showed it to the other fishermen, who were all around him. They all wanted to see it. He held it out for them. They all reached for it.

The accident took place about six o'clock last night. Dr. McInerney was summoned and rendered the necessary medical assistance. The injured man was later taken to the Public Hospital.

As early as 7:30 o'clock yesterday morning people began to gather in front of Waterbury & Rising's Union street store waiting an opportunity to buy the goods that were being offered for sale. The goods were in great demand and were quickly sold.

THE GAELIC SUPPORTERS FIGHT AMONG THEMSELVES

LONDON, June 6—There is trouble brewing between the "Gaelic Scots," and those who speak "genuine Gaelic."

The Gaelic in London have been meeting frequently for the purpose of discussing "Gaeldom" which is Gaelic for Scotland. At a typical meeting at the fine old Scots Corporation Hall nearly one hundred were recently in attendance upon the meeting, fully one-half of whom were "bonnie lasses."

Mr. Gillies, a Gael, who has crossed the Tweed read a paper in English on the Gaelic movement in which with a gravity worthy of Mr. Bernard Shaw he sacrificed his brother "Anglicised Scots," bitterly lamented the "internationalism" of the Highlander and made a fierce appeal for the revival of the Gaelic language. He declared that the people of Scotland who do not speak Gaelic are only to be called "Gaelic" and are on a par with the Chinese soldiers at Wethalwei, who used mongrel pidgin English.

The Gaelic language, he added, is the secret power by which Gaeldom would forge the weapons that would break up as many fragments as a potter's vessel the hideous fabric of foreign power. "Scotsmen are sick of the Union and wish to be free," he cried, and he looked forward with a glow when they would achieve the national independence for which Bruce fought and Wallace died.

ATTENTION!

"The second coming of Christ, as revealed in the seventh chapter of the Prophecy of the Book of Daniel," will be the subject of the discourse to be delivered by Eld. J. O. Miller Sunday evening, June 8th, at 7 p. m. in Foresters' Hall on Charlotte street, near King's Square. The general public are invited to come and hear the truths for these last days.

WHERE HE WORSHIPPED.

As the new minister of the village was on his way to evening service he met a rising young man of the place whom he was anxious to have become an active member of the church.

"Good evening, my young friend," he said solemnly. "Do you ever attend a place of worship?"

"Yes, indeed, sir, regularly every Sunday night," replied the young fellow, with a smile. "I'm on my way to see her now."
