EACH SAYS OTHER CAUSED DISASTER

Conflicting Evidence in Empress Inquiry—Captain Kendall Says Storstad Changed Her Course Quebec, June 16—Evidence amplifying the known contentions in regard to the cause of the disaster to the Empress of Ireland at Father Point in St. Lawrence on May 29 was brought out at today's opening session of the investigating Dominion commission, of which Lord Mersey, of the British house of peers, is chairman. So far, the main arguments of Captain Kendall of the Empress that he was stationary when rammed by the collier Storstad; and of the owners of the collier, that the Empress placed herself in front of the vessel, which was the cause of the disaster, have been set forth. The testimony of the crew on the stand for several hours, gave a straightforward account of the cause of the terrible morning, along the lines of the testimony at the Rimouski inquiry. Questioned by Lord Mersey as to why he stopped his ship when he had turned his green light to that of the Storstad, in conformity with navigation rules, he claimed he took the store vessel as a measure of safety. He said he was not to be got by the lawyer for the Storstad to admit that his boat could have drifted down and struck the Empress, unless the collier had changed her course after the collision. He was of the opinion had taken place. That the collier had not changed her course after first sighting the Empress, though it was the opinion of the jury at the inquiry, was a matter that he was not prepared to discuss. He said he was not prepared to discuss the matter, as he was not a lawyer, and he was not a member of the jury. He said he was not prepared to discuss the matter, as he was not a lawyer, and he was not a member of the jury. An Englishman named White, who since his arrival in Canada about twelve years ago has with his family been residing in Saskatchewan, is at present searching for a farm in Charlotte county to settle there. He has looked over several farms but has not yet selected one. Speaking of the possibilities here, Mr. White says that they are far greater, as far as farming is concerned, than in the western provinces, and he would not advise anyone to go west to do farming when there are such brilliant opportunities here. He said that another reason why he came east was that he may secure education for his children. Where he was living in Saskatchewan he had to go thirty-five miles to get a train, and it was impossible to get his children to school.
