WORSHIP

Worship in a Sunday school usually consists of quiet music, singing, giving, prayer, reading of Scripture and meditation. These exercises are in charge of the general superintendent and the departmental assistants. How, then, can the Missionary Committee realize its aims through the order of worship?

Instrumental Music

A loud, boisterous, highly strung orchestra with frivolous music is not conducive either to reverential awe in the presence of God or to the culture of appreciation. Then why not aim to make use of the best music? The playing of a tribal melody of the American Indians or the native air of a foreign people or a representative selection from a great author who is of Magyar, Italian, French, or some other foreign nationality, with proper introductory and explanatory sentences by the superintendent
