

the boy. I am sorry he has turned out so badly; however, I will have him up here and speak to him. This sort of thing cannot be permitted."

And accordingly orders were given to the constable. When in the evening Mr. Robertson informed Richard what he had done, the boy flew into a terrible passion, and abused his tutor with a violence of language which shocked and astonished him, and opened his eyes to his own culpability in allowing him to go on his way unchecked. He in vain endeavored to silence the furious lad. He had been so long without exercising any authority that he had now no authority to exercise, and after an angry scene Richard flung himself out of the room and left his tutor in a state bordering on consternation.