

WRITE TO THIS WOMAN

If You Want to Stop a Man From Drink.

She cured her husband, her brother and several of her neighbors, and now she generously offers to tell you of the simple, inexpensive remedy that she so successfully used. The remedy can be given to the patient unnoticed so there is no publicity of your private affairs. She is anxious to help others so we earnestly advise every one of our readers who has a dear one who drinks to drop her a line today. She makes no charge for this help. She has nothing to sell (she asks for no money and accepts none) so there is no reason why you should not write her at once. Of course, she expects that you are yourself personally interested in curing one who drinks, and are not writing out of mere curiosity. Send your letter in confidence to her home. Simply write your name and full address plainly in the coupon below and send it to her.

MRS. MARGARET ANDERSON,

When Lord Halsbury was a barrister, he was arguing a case on behalf of a Welshman, and showed a great knowledge of the principality and its people. "Come, come," said the judge at last, "you know you cannot make yourself out to be a Welshman."

"Perhaps not," replied the barrister, "but I have made a great deal of money out of Welshmen in my time."

"Well, then," replied the judge, "suppose we call you a Welshman by extraction."

Feeding Farm Hands.

Every farmer's wife knows what tremendous appetites farm hands usually have; but while they eat well they work well, too.

Here's a good suggestion about feeding farm hands. Give them plenty of Quaker Oats. A big dish of Quaker Oats porridge with sugar and cream or milk is the greatest breakfast in the world for a man who needs vigor and strength for a long day's work. The man that eats Quaker Oats plentifully and often is the man who does good work without excessive fatigue. There is a sustaining quality in Quaker Oats not found in other foods, and for economy it is at the head of the list. A whole family can breakfast for a week on 10c worth of Quaker Oats.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS. Miscellaneous.

STABLE WHITEWASH—VALUE OF HORSE MANURE.

1. What would make a good mixture to whitewash a stable?
2. Would you add coal oil to whitewash a henhouse?
3. Would painting a galvanized tank make it more durable, it being out to the weather?
4. What is military-stable manure worth per ton, drawn daily on the land?
5. Would whitewashing shingles on the roof make them wear longer?

J. S. K.

Ans.—1. Fresh lime slacked, and afterwards mixed with water to a proper consistency, can not be excelled for appearance or sanitary effect. If something which will not rub off and which is very easily brushed on is desired, the following old standard formula may be used: Take one-half bushel of lime, slack with boiling water, make into a milk, and strain through a fine sieve. Add to this a peck of salt dissolved in hot water, three pounds of ground rice boiled to a paste and stirred in while hot; half a pound of whiting, and one pound of glue, previously dissolved in a glue-pot over a slow fire. To this mixture add five gallons of hot water, stir it well, cover, and let stand for a few days. This mixture is best applied hot, and a pint will cover a square yard.

2. Better not. If henhouse is lice-infested, take corrosive sublimate 4 ozs., common salt 4 ozs., dissolve in 2 to 4 quarts of water. When completely dissolved, dilute to 25 gallons. With this, carefully spray every crevice, nook and corner of the house, and afterwards whitewash.

3. It certainly would.
4. The value of manure is much greater than most farmers have ever realized. But to say just how much per ton it is worth is not possible, as so many unknown factors enter into the case. It is much more valuable to a gardener than to a farmer, as the increased yield obtained in his case represents a larger money's worth. But to a farmer who applies manure to corn or root crops, it is quite safe to say that it is worth, laid down on the field, at least one dollar per ton.

5. Not likely.

"The sensational feature of the American Royal Show this year was the wonderful exhibit made by the Shorthorns. While the Herefords and Angus failed to hold the high standard of early American Royal shows, the Shorthorns have seemed to grow stronger each year, and the exhibit of 1909 will go down in history, not only as the best Shorthorn show the American Royal has yet produced, but will generally be considered by those in a position to pass impartial judgment, to be the greatest show the Shorthorn breeders ever made in this country. It was a show in which the foot of the class was but little below the prizewinners, and never has competition waxed so warm in the Shorthorn rings as at Kansas City this season. Prize-winners and champions at State Fairs this year had to be content with places at almost the foot of the class at Kansas City this season in a number of instances, and outstanding winners were few and far between. We have been attending the Shorthorn shows for the past fifteen years, but do not remember of ever having seen a show at which competition was so close, and in which so many good cattle were in the various rings. It was exceptionally strong in numbers as well as in quality, there being from ten to twenty entries in the various classes, with the exception of the senior bull ring, which had seven entries. Captain Robson, of London, Ontario; Chas. Herr, of Lodi, Wisconsin; and Thos. Clark, of Beecher, Illinois, judged the classes, and they performed the difficult task with credit, the judging in general being as satisfactory as judging at a big show usually is, being very carefully done. Their work in the classes was particularly good. In the herd and group awards, there is still room for argument, and it will take the Chicago Show to settle the final question as to the ratings for the year in the herd and group awards."—Wallace's Farmer.
