2. In such case, who would be responsible for the payment of his salary?

3. Where an Inspector instructs the Trustees to engage an unqualified teacher (by letter), which they do for a few days, has the said Inspector a right to instruct the Treasurer of the Municipality not to pay over any money whatever to the Trustees?

Ontario.

SUBSCRIBER.

1. How long does a cow, affected with contagious abortion, usually carry her calf?
2. Does a cow thus affected give the usual signs of calving beforehand?
3. Is there a certain means of telling when a cow slips her calf, whether she is affected or not? If so, how?
4. Are cows, after once recovering, immune from the disease?

Ans.—1. There is no definite time. Some abort soon after being bred; others may carry their calves nearly the full nine months.

2. Some do, if they have carried their calves up to near the usual period of pregnancy.

3. The only method would be by isolating the organism which causes the disease, so that, practically, there is no method.

4. Cows generally become immune in from two to three years.

A detailed black and white illustration of a cow, likely a Friesian or similar breed, standing in a field. The cow has a distinctive pattern of dark spots on a lighter background. It is facing right, with its head slightly turned. The background shows a simple landscape with some foliage and a fence line in the distance.
