Lincoln's Opinion of Himself. In the "Memoirs of Henry Villard" the author tells of the time Lincoln the author tells of the time Lincoln spoke to him of the growth of his ambition since the days when he was clerking in a country store, and his greatest desire politically was to be a member of the state legislature.

"Since then, of course," he said laughingly, "I have grown some, but my friends got me into this business (meaning the canvass). I did not consider myself qualified for the United States senate, and it took me a long time to persuade myself that I was. Now, to be sure," he continued, with another of his peculiar laughs, "I am convinced that I am good enough for it; but, in spite of all, I am saying to myself every day, "It is too big a thing myself every day, 'It is too big a thing for you; you will never get it.' Mary (Mrs. Lincoln) insists, however, that I am going to be senator and president of the Uinted States too." "These last words," adds Mr. Villard, "he followed with a roar of laughter, with his arms around his knees and shaking all over with mirth at his wife's ambition. 'Just think,' he exclaimed, 'of such a sucker as me as president!' "

Acute Vision of Birds. Birds have a very acute vision, perhaps the most acute of any creature, and the sense is also more widely difand the sense is also more respectively a bird can with man. Consequently a bird can see sideways as well as objects in front of it. A bird sees, showing great uneasiness in consequence, a hawk long before it is visible to man. So, too, fowls and pigeons find minute scraps of food, distinguishing them from what appear to us similar pieces of earth or gravel. Young chickens are also able to find their own food, knowing its position and how distant it is as soon as they are hatched, whereas a child only very gradually learns either to see or to understand the distance of objects. Several birds, apparently the young of all those that nest on the ground, can see quite well directly they come out of the shell, but the young birds that nest in trees or on rocks are born blind and have to be

The Big Bell of Burms.
One of the sights of the Shwe Dagone pagoda in Burma is a gigantic bell of bronze, weighing forty-two and a quarter tons and said to be the third largest bell in the world, the largest being in Moscow and the next largest in Mingin, also in Burma. After con-quering Burma the British undertook to carry the great Rangun bell to Cal-cutta as a trophy, but dropped it overboard in the Rangun river, where it defied all the efforts of the engineers to raise it. Some years later the Burmese, who had not ceased to mourn its loss, begged to be allowed to recover it. Their petition was granted, and by attaching to it an incredible number of bamboo floats the unwieldy mass of metal was finally lifted from its mud-dy bed and triumphantly restored to

That's the personal question a woman asks herself when she reads of the cures of womanly diseases by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Why shouldn't it cure her?

Is it a complicated case? Thousands of such cases have been cured by "Favorite Prescription," Is it a condition which local doctors have declared incurable? Among the hundreds of thousands of sick women cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription there are a great many who were pronounced incurable by local doctors. Wonders have been worked by "Favorite Prescription" in the cure of irregularity, weakening drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It always helps. It almost always cures.

IN MASCULINE ATTIRE

MADAME DIEULAFOY, THE FRENCH WOMAN SCIENTIST.

How She Came to Wear Male Garb Is an Interesting Story-Recalled to Outside

In France, behind some other nations in the emancipation of woman, the Government by special license permits a member of the teninine sex to wear male attire. It a nine sex to wear male attire, it is petition is presented to it setting forth sufficient reason, industrial or otherwise, why the wearing of trousers will be of advantage to a woman, she generally gets the privilege and thereafter may unmolested wais abroad dressed as a man.

How Mme. Diculator came to wear trousers is an interesting story. She and her equally distinguished husband, M. Marcel Auguste Diculator, are both archaeologists. When she was thirty years old, in 1881, her husband received from the French Government a commission to go to Persia to explore the ancient ruins there. His wife, already drawn to the study of archaeology, accompanthere. His wife, already drawn to the study of archaeology, accompanied him. Eagerly she climbed down into holes and over crumbling walls, spending her days watching the progress of the excavations. She found that in moments of interest the most intense she would suddenly be recalled to outside things by her feminine skirts. At the same time she saw her husband constantly skipping about unimpeded and walking quite away from her when they went among the ruins. Again, as a woman it was dangerous for her to go man it was dangerous for her to go unattended into many places which she needed to explore. Her husband laden with their treasure, which enriched nobly the French archaeological museum. And then, strangely enough, or perhaps it was not strange, Mme. Diculaloy found she had been free so long that she could not abide the thought of going back into the slavery of petticoats.

Mme. Diculafoy petitioned the Government to allow her to continue to wear men's clothes in France, and the authorities gave her a special license to do so.

the authorities gave her a special license to do so.

One of the most important of M. and Mme. Diculafoy's discoveries was the ancient palace and necropolis at Susa, in Persia, of Artaxerxes II. the Great, the follower of Zoroaster, was died 358 B. C. Mme. Diculafoy wrote a book describing the researches at Susa, and it brought her fame. Then she was made a member of the Legion of Honor.

Then she was made a member of the Legion of Honor.

Jane Dieulafoy has made also on her own account a series of investigations guite as important as discovering the palace of Artaxerxes. The common belief was for many years that oriental art took its rise in Arabia. That did not seem possible, considering the tribes of bloody barbarians whom Mohammed fought and conquered, yet it was believed. Mme Dieulafoy doubted this.

believed. Mme Diculatoy doubted this.

She began a patient tracing of oriental art; With the enthusiasm and persistence of a lover of art she traveled and studied. She spent fiften years in this work. She began with the remains of Moorish and old time art in Spain. Through Algiers, Morocco and eastward to Egypt the thread ran, then farther and farther east till at last, upon the site of ancient Babylan, she discovered the cradle of oriental art and arts. The fair, slender woman in coat and trousers is an eloquent and accomplished lecturer.
