

The Planet Junior

Supplement to The Saturday Planet

VOL. III

CHATHAM, ONT., SATURDAY, AUGUST 12, 1905

No. 21

WHEN THE POPE DINES AT HOME

Like Emile Lombet, Pope Pius X has a desire for simplicity and informality that equally distinguishes him from all the men who, as a Pontifex at Venice, was always at home alike to the humblest artisan as well as to the richest and grandest person of the court of life when raised to the papal chair. As he sits one occupying such a position, his mode of life is always quiet and informal, and, unlike Leo, who was so happy as when he is surrounded by the members of his household or his dignitaries of the church. He sits at a table, raised a little higher than the others, but he is not alone. This is the only trace of formality that is observed.

In the Pope's dining room the ordinary ornaments of such an apartment are replaced by religious pictures and a few objects of historical significance. The table is covered with a white cloth, and the other rooms are almost all the same except the beautiful one in which the Pope's private study is located. At one end of the hall speaker is a floor, at one end of the hall speaker is a floor, at one end of the hall speaker is a floor.

ESKIMO COB

MAKING.

The skill of the Eskimo is shown in the excellence of the things he manufactures from the slender stock of material. Without nails, for the most part without iron, his sleds and boats are made firm and strong. The fastenings are of bone-made cord.

A heavy harpoon line, used in the hunting of walrus, is made of the skin of the "square dipper" seal, an animal about eight feet long. For such use the skin is not removed from the seal without cutting it, as one might pull off a wet stocking. The whole hide is thus preserved in the form of a sock. It is then placed in water and allowed to remain until the hair becomes decomposed. This is done by the Eskimo, who, after peeling off, and a clean white pelt remains.

When the pelt is taken from the water and with a sharp knife cut it into one long even while lying by beginning at one end and cutting through the hair. The result is a hairy white even line, three-quarters of an inch wide, and it is ready to be used. It is allowed to dry, after which it is tightly stretched and dried thoroughly in the sun. The result is a heavy white cord, which is used in the making of a heavy Manila rope.

Many a man never has any hair, except a few on his head, and he is called a "baldy" or "baldy head."

OUR SCHOOL

One Excellent Essay Written for The Planet Junior in the Gold Medal Competition, and Highly Commended by the Judges

Of all the beautiful buildings in Chatham, the one to my eyes is our school. It is situated on a beautiful large and green plot. It is built of red brick and trimmed with beautiful carved iron gates, all of which have very pleasant teachers. On entering the front door we find a large airy hall, and hanging on the wall is the picture of our school and a picture of a man who is named one hundred dollars for the school. On the right hand side of the hall is the fourth grade. It is very bright and cheerful, and the children are very happy. They are playing on the large green grassy plot. The other rooms are almost all the same except the beautiful one in which the Pope's private study is located. At one end of the hall speaker is a floor, at one end of the hall speaker is a floor, at one end of the hall speaker is a floor.

AN UNOFFICIAL TRANSACTION

EMPEROR WILLIAMS ELABORATE TABLE.

The same elaborate magnificence which characterized all of Emperor William's public appearances is shown in the arrangement of the table. Dinner is served on silver plates and Royal Berlin china, while the drinking glasses are ornamented on the table. The table is covered with a white cloth, and the other rooms are almost all the same except the beautiful one in which the Pope's private study is located. At one end of the hall speaker is a floor, at one end of the hall speaker is a floor, at one end of the hall speaker is a floor.

What was that forty-five dollar bill you deposited with me, I asked. Sorry then, but I can't pay that till the check comes back. In about two days more, I can give you the hundred and fifty dollars. I have just been ordered to Portland. One son, and I must go to-day. I didn't know it yesterday, for I wouldn't have made that deposit. To-day I must go to-day. You may be sorry for you, said the father, but I have no option. You may be honest, but you must understand that this is a very old game, and the best of it is that you must have a very old game. We must have security till we turn on the gas.

Argument did no good, and the young man, angry, counting the hundred and fifty dollars in his hand, and directly before him, he said to the father, you allow I may be honest, but you can't risk forty-five dollars on it. That is the case, exactly. The father started to say that he could not really mistake after the deposit of his money and counted the bills. He looked at the deposit, then slipping the fifty-dollar bill in the drawer, counted out forty-five in the pocket. He said to the father, playing a very old game on the bank, but personally I reckon you are all right. There's your money.

Many a man never has any hair, except a few on his head, and he is called a "baldy" or "baldy head."

A LITTLE TALK TO MEN

Your first duty is to your home and family. If you fulfill this task there will be plenty of time for play, but if you do not you will have no time for anything else. You must first of all be a good man, and then a good father, and then a good citizen. You must first of all be a good man, and then a good father, and then a good citizen. You must first of all be a good man, and then a good father, and then a good citizen.

VARIOUS MODES FOR GETTING MARRIED

An interesting subject has come to light in the question why do men and women marry? Many reasons have been found. All of them are for the sake of the children. Some men marry for the sake of the children, some for the sake of the money, and some for the sake of the love. Some men marry for the sake of the children, some for the sake of the money, and some for the sake of the love.

Some people are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor.

THE PLEASURES OF THE SWING.

One form of outdoor exercise and amusement holds its attractions for all ages, and that is swinging. One old apple tree in my father's yard was known as the children's tree, largely because about eight feet from the ground it was forked at a perfect right angle for a distance of three feet and then, as if having determined it had gone far enough to allow of the swing of swinging, it bent over and hung down like a hammock. Here from my earliest days I swung, and I have never since found a more pleasant way of spending an hour of the day.

How natural it is for children and for persons older grown to derive the delights of the swing! When the boy and the girl visit or go to make a home in the country? It is first a swing. The trees seem to be beckoning and calling. "Come swing, upon our boughs, and you will find that you will not have them." You will see the children swinging the call of the swing, and you will see the call of the swing, and you will see the call of the swing.

CURIOSITIES OF FRENCH DUELING.

The present-day duel in France is much less fatal than the duel of former generations ago. The account of the duel of former generations ago is a very fascinating study, and the eyes are, perhaps, the most interesting subject of all. The eyes are, perhaps, the most interesting subject of all. The eyes are, perhaps, the most interesting subject of all.

Some people are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor.

FAMOUS PEOPLE BY FANNIE M. LOTHROP

FLORENCE NIGHTINGALE
In her home in the West End of London, passing the days of the late Autumn of her life in an invalid chair, lives a white-haired, sweet-faced, kindly-voiced noble woman, whom the world knows as Florence Nightingale. Born in 1820 in Florence, Italy, the daughter of a wealthy English family, she was educated in the best of schools and became a nurse, and a great one at that.

CHARACTER FROM THE EYES

Character reading from the features is a very fascinating study, and the eyes are, perhaps, the most interesting subject of all. The eyes are, perhaps, the most interesting subject of all. The eyes are, perhaps, the most interesting subject of all.

Some people are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor.

Short Stories

Something to interest the Boys and Girls.

MUCH AND ABOUT NOTHING.

An old woman who entered a savings bank the other day, says Harry Weekly, was asked whether she wanted to draw or deposit some money in, "was the reply. The clerk entered the amount and pushed the slip toward her, to sign. "Sign on this line, please," he said. "Just above it." "Yes, above it?" "Yes, above it?" "Yes, above it?"

ICE IN THE ARCTIC.

The largest mass of ice in the world is probably the one which this winter the whole of the Arctic is covered with. It is believed to now form a block about 600,000 square miles in area, and averaging a mile and a half in thickness. The ice is larger in volume than the whole body of water in the Mediterranean, and there is enough of it to cover the globe. The ice is larger in volume than the whole body of water in the Mediterranean, and there is enough of it to cover the globe.

Some people are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor.

Some people are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor. They are so high and mighty that they never look down at the poor.