An Angel in the House.

How sweet it were, if without feign'd right
Or dyes of the demented heavens light,
An angel came to us, and we could bear
To see him, issue from the silent air.
If evening in our room, and bend on ours
His bright eyes, and bring us from his bowers
News of dear friends, and children who have Never been dead indeed—as we shall know for aye.
About we think and wish we daily see.
About our hearts—angels that are to be.
Or may be if they will, and we prepare.
Their souls and spirits to meet in happy air.
A child, a friend, a wife whose heart had beat
In union with our own, breathe its future wings.
In death's cold arms, and breathe its future wings.
—Leigh Hunt.

Playing With Temptation.

The largest hall in the town was packed with voters. On all sides were faces, for the election was not far off, and an important question was to be decided. For the past three elections the town had voted "dry," but now there seemed danger of a relapse. The new water system had made taxes heavy. The licensing of the saloons would help to meet this large and necessary expense. Many a good citizen was leaning toward the measure, not without regret to be sure, with a few twinges of conscience. But since it's a question that seemed to them the necessities of the case.

No orator of reputation had been invited to address the meeting. The speakers were the citizens of the town, who best had a right to be heard on the question. "It is a case of spread-eagle," I'd sit down mighty quick!" said the shrewd fagot, wiry man who was the first to address the meeting. "But since it's an occasion for common-sense ideas, I'm not afraid to say what I think." And he said it shrewdly and quaintly, and the faces in the audience showed that his words had carried weight.

The open saloon was such a thing of the past with these people that they had almost forgotten how to estimate its perils. The temperance sentiment was in that quietest state which is so likely to result when the need for fighting is over. The second speaker took much the same stand as the first. The third protested, but in a half hearted way which reflected in favor of his predecessors. There seemed no doubt as to the sentiment of the mass meeting, and there it was that the good friends here had taken to the front of the platform. As one of the speakers finished and took his seat to the accompaniment of clapping and stamping which shook the old building violently, a young man, sitting in one of the rear seats, rose to his feet and started toward the platform. He was slight of figure and boyish of face, and as wondering eyes followed him, a hum of recognition ran through the room. "That's Wallace Fulton! What's he after?"

"Maybe he's going to make a speech," said a youth near the door, and laughed at his own wit. But in another moment an expression of incredulous amazement had banished his smile, for, after exchanging a few words with the chairman, Wallace had stepped to the front of the platform and stood facing the audience. He was very pale, and something appearing in his look hushed his auditors to absolute silence. He was a favorite, this courteous, kindly young man, who had come to them five years before, and who, by diligence and uprightness, had won golden opinions on every hand. But those who knew him best and never fancied his capacity in which he was now appearing. Modest and shrinking to a fault, he seemed the last person in town to face a public audience uninvited.

Quitting to the strange hush in the room, his tremulous voice was easily heard. "I'm not a speechmaker," he said, unsteadily, "and I don't know enough about the finances of the town to make an answer to what has already been said to-night. But there's one side of the question that Sees the End of the World at Hand.

General Booth, of the Salvation Army, has taken upon his shoulders the mantle of those who have predicted the imminent dissolution of the world because of its wickedness. Addressing a meeting at London, he said: "We have a world setting God Almighty at naught, and rushing forward reckless of his wishes and threatening us to their fate. Notwithstanding all that has been done in years gone by, men and women still pursue their wickedness, to day in all the nations of the world."

Not only one nation, but all nations, seem headed together as one great people of rebellion, transgression, and wickedness, until some think—I believe with a considerable degree of probability—that we may be approaching rapidly the end of all things, with similar results, but far surpassing in magnitude, anything that has gone before, that all things may be wound up, but that instead of there being a deluge of water sweeping the world and its inhabitants, there will be destruction by fire.

The Largest Scrap Heap in the World.

The largest scrap heap in the world is in San Francisco, a relic of the great fire which followed the earthquake of April, 1906. It is 40 feet high, 100 feet square, and contains 20,000 tons, all cut in equal lengths, 18 inches; all is piled in one solid mass, with the sides as smooth and solid as a brick wall.

This is the only one of four heaps of equal size and proportion which remains intact in its original size and shape, the other three having been drawn upon as the material was needed. Many other scrap heaps are piled about the bay awaiting shipment, some as big as a house and others mere hills, scattered over acres of ground.

Since the fire one company has handled 150,000 tons of this old material. It has six large cranes in operation to cut the iron and steel, either by hand or by the furnace. The bulk of this scrap is shipped to the Atlantic coast or to Europe.

Helps for the Home Seamstress.

The reason for expending woolen goods before the material is cut into fabric is that the moisture, where seams are pressed, is apt to leave an ugly mark, the finished garment is apt to shrink when worn, and if caught in a shower when it is apt to spot the material.

Too much stress cannot be laid upon the necessity of strict following of the lines of the pattern in cutting. As, in following, the two layers of material are face to face, the parts cut double are bound to be opposites—one for each side of the garment, and a mistake is impossible. Single-width material not having any figure, stripe or gage, may be folded with the two cut ends together.

For heading to be done by hand, put the heavier attachment on the machine without thread, turn an even "cat's paw" at the start; run the goods through the heading as if sewing, and afterwards hem by hand. The line of perforations is easy to follow. For hand-run tucks, use a coarse needle, mark with the machine as above, and run thread in the holes thus made.

To keep silk thread from unwinding too rapidly when sewing on the machine, put a small piece of thick cloth under the machine.

A Country of Homes.

Out of the total land area of 15,385,971 acres, about 37 63 per cent. of Nova Scotia is occupied by farmers. The remainder, comprising pasture or wood land, rocky swamps, or uncultivated or grazed. The rest is a rocky, rough, tree-abounding land, where prospectors in search of gold and other minerals, and where sportsmen in quest of land or water game, find their paradise. Divided as it is, the province presents one of the most attractive places for comfortable farm homes to be found anywhere, affording every opportunity for those whose interests lie solely in the pursuit of the poetical and artistic life who revel in a country where within easy access of the most busy farming scene, one can lie away and enjoy the luxuries of camping, fishing, shooting, boating and all other pleasures of a healthy outdoor life.

THE SUFFERING WOMAN ENDURES

Can Be Vanquished by the Rich, Red Blood Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Actually Make.

Behind the veil of her modesty and silent patience nearly every woman endures suffering that casts a shadow over half her existence. An aching back, tired limbs, attacks of faintness, and headache upon headache need not be part of a woman's life. Such trials indicate plainly that the system requires the new blood that is supplied by Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. These Pills are valued by suffering women, who have used them, above all other medicines, because they make the rich, red blood that makes women well, bright and at their best. This is the secret of the great success of Dr. Williams' Pink Pills. Mrs. Geo. C. Wadden, Wadden's Cove, N. S., says: "A few years ago I was completely run down. At times I would be so weak that I was unable to do my housework. I suffered from severe headaches, pains in the back and dizziness, and at times I felt as though life was scarcely worth living. I had tried several medicines without getting relief, when I finally decided to give Dr. Williams' Pink Pills a trial. After using two or three boxes I noticed a change, and after taking the Pills about two months I was again enjoying good health, and have since been well and strong. I can confidently recommend Dr. Williams' Pink Pills to all weak and run-down women."

You can get this great blood-building, health restoring medicine from any dealer in drugs, or the Pills will be sent by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 by The Dr. Williams' Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

If troubled with indigestion, constipation, no appetite or feel bilious, give Chamberlain's Stomach and Liver Tablets a trial and you will be pleased with the result. These tablets invigorate the stomach and liver and strengthen the digestion. Sold by Rand's Drug Store.

The Big 'I'

It is the "exaggerated ego" that makes a girl when you tell her you have a headache, return the response: "Have you? My throat is dreadfully sore."

Or, if you announce, "I am planning to get a new frock," either reply, "I have just ordered a new hat," or else, "I wish I could have one myself."

In other words, it is that obnoxious to one's self that leads one to turn every statement that is made in to something applying to one's self, instead of giving a quick, ready sympathy to the statement made by the other.—Christine Terhune Herrick.

Bronchitis More Than a Cold

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Limes and Turpentine.

Any cold is serious enough when the "dreadful" possibilities are considered, but when there is soreness of the throat and a dry, hard cough you can look for bronchitis, which is often confused with an ordinary cold.

It is usually known by aching limbs and body-pains, chilly feelings, weakness and weakness, pain in the chest and a light, tearing cough. Fever, dry skin, thirst, coated tongue and constipation are other symptoms.

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Limes and Turpentine seems almost like a specific for bronchitis because it is so successful in loosening up the cough, giving expectoration and preventing the inflammation from reaching the lungs.

Turpentine is so prompt in affording relief and so thorough and far-reaching in its action that it precedes when ordinary cough medicines have no influence. Get it at all dealers, or Edmondson, Dicks & Co., Toronto.
