Farm and Household

The German and French peasants possess in a pre-eminent degree the ability to use everything that will assist in fertilizing the soil, and making every desert place in the vicinity of their outcrops "rich-soon like the rose." They manage to raise vegetables on plots of the very smallest size it would be possible to them to cultivate. The American householder is used to abundant garden space in the country, and does not think of training peach and pear trees against walls and to utilize all the space that it is possible to utilize. The abundance of the vine and plants cultivated in the vicinity of outcrops in Europe, not only brings its reward in fruit and vegetable food, but actually make the air more wholesome to breathe and protect the cottages from the other wise scorching rays of the sun. Cultivate blooming vines, and flowers of all kinds around the kitchen door, because they are wholesome as well as beautiful. A neat housekeeper can be recognized more certainly by the neat appearance of the back door than by an ornate front door with shining knobs and scutchions.

Fifteen Savory Sandwiches

In preparing sandwiches care should be taken to make them look as attractive as possible. Two thick slices of bread with a large slice of ham between do not make an inviting sandwich. The bread should always be thinly cut and carefully buttered, and when desired the slices may be cut in round or triangular form, with the crust removed. The following sandwiches are easily prepared and are especially dainty for summer luncheons.

Egg.— Mash the yolks of hard boiled eggs, with a little mustard, salt and pepper and melted butter, in the proportion of one tablespoonful to three yolks. Just before putting between the thin slices of bread add the whites of the eggs, finely chopped.

Fish.—Take any kind of cold, cooked fish—salmon and halibut are best—make it carefully, removing the bones, and, by the addition of mayonnaise dressing make it sufficiently moist to spread, or instead of the dressing use cream, salt and pepper and a little melted butter.

Water-Cress.—Dip the leaves in mayonnaise dressing and put between the slices; or chop hard-boiled eggs with the water-cress, and add melted butter, mustard, salt and pepper.

Cheese.—Chop French onion cut in tiny pieces; then add the mayonnaise dressing and hard-boiled eggs mashed to a paste.

LETTUCE.—Choose small lettuce leaves, or carefully tear large ones into the desired size. Spread the slices of bread with mayonnaise dressing, and put the leaves between the slices.

WALNUT.—Chop the nuts very fine and add either salad dressing or cream cheese Season well. Sandwiches with this filling are particularly good when made with brown bread.

HAM.—The meat must always be chopped; add mustard according to taste. An agreeable variation is to chop the ham with the yolks of hard-boiled eggs, adding melted butter and mustard.

CHICKEN.—If very tender, the meat may be sliced thin and then seasoned to taste. But the better way is to mince it and add mayonnaise dressing, or a little rich cream and a taste of mustard if desired.

LEVER.—Add a little Worcestershire sauce to finely chopped calf's liver.

LAMB'S TONGUE.—These are, of course, small and may be put between the bread in very thin slices. A suspicion of mustard will be found desirable.

OLIVE.—Chop olives very fine, season with salt and pepper and add mayonnaise dressing.

TARTARE.—To make "tartare" sandwiches add to the preceding mixture capers, chopped cucumber pickle, parsley and a little onion.

CUCUMBER.—Thinly slice the cucumbers and dip in mayonnaise dressing.

CREAM.—Spread very thick cream upon the slices of bread. Graham and brown breads are excellent for the purpose. Add grated cheese to the cream to make delicious cheese sandwiches.

CORNER-BEEF.—Chop the beef fine, add a little oil, vinegar, mustard, salt and pepper. The further addition of cream is an improvement.

Fried Tomatoes

There is no nicer dish for a hot weather breakfast, lunch, or supper, than a dish of fried tomatoes. Choose large, firm and not over ripe tomatoes, and slice about half an inch thick. Fry in hot fat after first rolling in flour and seasoning. Have no more fat in the pan than is just necessary to fry them. Brown on both sides without burning; cover gently with hot milk, add butter, and as soon as the milk bubbles thicken slightly with flour wet in cold milk. The sauce must be perfectly smooth. Pour over toast. You may remove the slices of tomatoes to a dish containing hot buttered toast and mix the sauce in the pan afterward, if you prefer.

The Morning Influence

The woman who makes her morning a time of mere slatternly gathering up of the discarded fragments of yesterday, can never hope to hold the reins which guide the domestic forces into "the realms of upper day." The fair serenity of a cheerful face, and the sweet freshness of a well-chosen breakfast dress, are like the rising of an indoor sun to those who gather about the family table for their morning meal. The school boy orders his boisterous tones to respond to her thoughtful questioning; he feels conscious of his personal untidiness, or of the careless gathering of books and papers; he realizes the latest barbarism in his strong young life, and feels that influence which, until he develops the unique allegiance of a lover, makes him bow to the lady-of-his-love, his mother. The door does not slam, the hands are cared for, the body is clean to the standard of a gentleman's cleanliness, and he is tamed by the presence of a lady whom he honors as much as by the parent he obeys. There is scarcely a more sure way of lifting the standard of family life up to the rule of true refinement than by guarding the morning meeting from disorder and discord, and inviting both beauty of service, and gentle good order to preside over the breakfast table.

Selfishness is a disease, for which and experience is the remedy. Railway wheels made of leather have been experimented with in France.

The newest billiard balls are made of cast steel. They are the same weight as ivory.

Baldness upon the top of the head is generally found upon men with large brains, though not necessarily of acute thought.

In Chinese cities streets are never built straight, from superstitious fear that processions of evil spirits might enter and remain.

The Prince of Wales is the champion golfer in Great Britain, his record being seventy-five occasions on which he has officiated in that capacity.

Lord Kelvin in a lecture stated that as a result of recent investigation it was estimated that the earth had been the abode of life about thirty million years. Ignorance of the law on the part of a lawyer receives its penalty in Chicago, where an attorney has been fined $50 and also sentenced to jail for thirty days.

It is a curious quality in many women that they exhibit no affection for husband or children, save in times of sickness or danger, when they are ready to sacrifice their lives to save the sufferers. I believe half the misery in families is the result of this peculiarity of one or both parties.

A woman will nag her husband to desperation when he is in perfect health and neglect him in a score of ways, but once let him fall ill, she will walk ten miles to get him a plaster for his back. Men will nurse their wives' heads, and be negligent in the expenditure of money for their necessities when they are well, but they will cheerfully mortgage all their worldly possessions to pay doctors and nurses if they become sick.

It is such a pity when people save their best affections and their sweetest acts for the dying, or the dead, or the exiled. There are wives who to-day are discussing their husband's faults with their neighbors, and allowing small resentments over smaller offenses to render the home the most uncomfortable place the man can find; yet, were any of these men to be accused of high treason, his wife would undoubtedly devote herself to his cause, and fight for him as valiantly as M^{rs}. Dreyfus has fought for her husband's vindication.

It is well to look always on the bright and hopeful side of life, but there are people who need to anticipate a tragedy in order to behave decently.
