

Laugh.

Laugh and the boy laughs with you, Frown, and he turns away, For there isn't a kid who has backward slid
But will tell you the same today.
It isn't all bad, nor is it all good,
This hustling old world of ours;
When craving for sweets there are lots of cheats—They're handing you lemon sours!

Laugh, and the world laughs with you, But keep your tongue in your head;
Have nothing to say, but turn away,
For the fellow who didn't is dead;

A frown is kin to a hateful word,
But a smile is always at par; You may borrow your money in time of peace,
But never a cent in war.

Smile, and the world smiles with you,
It doesn't know how to frown;
With a vacant stare 'till keep you there,
If ever it gets you down.
It has words of cheer for the rough and strong,
But it shows the yellow streak If you chance to slip on the backward dip.

And your courage is growing weak,
"Laugh, and the world laughs with you,"
It prizes a good griffin:
A gentle tee-hee; sets all hearts aglee,
And it's never "agin the law," But the fellow who frown and fusses

Has a hard old row to hoe, The fellow to blame is just himself
If he cannot make things go.
Keep pecking away at something If you want the hours to swing, For the happiest man is the toiler O, he's like a bird on the wing; He'll soar any height he wants to If he only keeps purpose in view;

He may laugh in the face of the old world,
Yes, Sonny—and so may you!
—DR. JAMES HERDERSON.

The Unfinished Prayer.
Now I lay me—say it, darling,
"Lay me," lisped the tiny lips Of my daughter, kneeling, bending, O'er her folded finger-tips.
"Down to sleep," "to sleep," she murmured:
And the curly head bent low,
"I pray the Lord," I gently added
"You can say it all, I know."

"Pray de Lord, the words came faintly—Fainter still, "my soul to teep."
Then the tired head fairly nodded,
And my child was fast asleep.
But the dewy eyes half opened When I clasped her to my breast,
And the dear voice gently whispered—
"Mamma, Dad knows all de yeast."

Oh! the trusting, sweet confiding Of the child-heart! Would that I
Thus might trust my Heavenly Father,
He Who hears my feeblest cry!

All's Fair in Love and War.
(BY GEORGE BARTON, in Extension Magazine.)

(Concluded)
"It's what he hasn't done," laughed the great one, with high good humor, "he thought he was going to get the best of John Rockhurst, but instead of that, I got the best of him."

The situation gradually dawned upon the girl and it did not improve her peace of mind.
"Do you think it was quite fair?" she asked with a fluttering of the eyelids.
The great man patted her on the cheeks.

"There, there, don't you bother your pretty little head about business—leave that to your Uncle Dudley."

They had been going about three-quarters of an hour when Rockhurst peered out into the surrounding country. It was strangely unfamiliar.

"I wonder if that muton-head knows where he's going," he murmured, savagely.

Aching Joints

In the fingers, toes, arms, and other parts of the body, are joints that are inflamed and swollen by rheumatism—but acid condition of the blood which affects the muscles also.

Sufferers dread to move, especially after sitting or lying long, and their condition is commonly worse in wet weather.

"I suffered dreadfully from rheumatism but have been completely cured by Hood's Sarsaparilla, for which I am deeply grateful." Miss FRANCES BARR, Prescott, Ont.

"I had an attack of the grip which left me weak and helpless and suffering from rheumatism. I began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla and this medicine has entirely cured me. I have no hesitation in saying it save my life." M. J. McDONALD, Trenton, Ont.

Hood's Sarsaparilla
Removes the cause of rheumatism—no outward application. Take it.

Five minutes later he pulled down the glass window that separated him from the driver.
"Do you know the way?" he thundered.

"Sure, sure," mumbled the chauffeur.
"That man acts as if he'd been drinking," complained the inag-nate to his niece.

Twenty minutes later he found that they were ascending an unusually steep hill. A second glance satisfied him that they were going up the side of a mountain. Rockhurst thrust his arm through the open window, and the next moment the cap and goggles came off the driver, revealing the smiling face of Curley, of the Chronicle.

The shock of the discovery caused the millionaire to fall back on the seat with a gasp of dismay and anger. Regina giggled with delight. Rockhurst pulled himself together.

"What's—what's the meaning of this masquerade?"
"It means," mimicked Curley,
"that all's fair in love and war."

"Turn back," thundered Rockhurst, "turn back, do you hear?"
"We've got to go to the top now and then come down the other side," was the blithe reply.

And such was the case, but on the return journey. Rockhurst managed to say:
"My telegram—did it go?"
"I'm sorry to say it did not—but I sent my story instead. That was really more important."

"Shall we return for Sam?"
asked Regina a moment later, with a pretense at timidity that deceived no one.

"No shouted the great man, with something that sounded very much like an oath. "He's the cause of all this. We'll let this young fool drive us into Phillipsburg."

"I'll do the best I can," grinned Curley, "although I don't pretend to be a first-class chauffeur."

It was dark and the electric lights were twinkling when they ran into Phillipsburg, and they heard the cries of the newsboys shouting the edition of the Chronicle containing Curley's great story.

Rockhurst groaned.
"That means the Governor will sign the miners' bill, and it means the defeat of my reorganization scheme for the Big Bolivar Mining Company."

There was silence until the car ran along the sidewalk of the Rockhurst home.

"Uncle," said Regina, in the tone she used when she was determined to have her wishes granted.
"Well?"
"You have influence with the owners of the Chronicle, haven't you?"

"I think I have."
"Well, I want you to have Frank's—that is, Mr. Curley's—salary increased."

"Is that all?" he asked grimly.
"No, I want you to invite him to take dinner with us tonight."

Rockhurst hesitated for the fraction of a second. After that the frown dissolved into a smile.
"You win; you both win.
Real men are scarce these days. I don't think I want to quarrel with a man who has the brains and the courage to beat me at my own game."

ALL DRUGGISTS

Spelling.

"Listen, Sadie, how do you spell—" Sadie held up a monitory finger. All at once she looked extremely dignified not to say formidable.

"No, Lee, if I tell you, you'll have to ask me again next time.
The only way is to look up the words you can't spell until you know them."

As Lee departed sulking to consult the dictionary, Sadie lifted a laughing face to her friend. Her air of portentous solemnity was swallowed up in plain mischief.

"I always put on that high and mighty air," she explained to Ernestine confidentially, "to save having to own up that I don't know. I never could spell, you see."

"Oh!"
"No, I hated spelling when I was a little thing, and I hate it now. Besides, I simply can't learn.
You know some people are that way."

"I should think," observed Ernestine a little hesitatingly "that by studying real hard—"
"No, it wouldn't do a particle of good," Sadie assured her. "I simply can't learn. But it doesn't make any difference," she added carelessly "Lots of people can't spell."

The next time Sadie and Ernestine met, the former was on her way to the city business college, and walking to save car fare. A great deal had happened since the two girls had their talk.
A period of financial depression had caught Sadie's father with a large amount of salable property on his hands, and heavy obligations to meet. In ordinary seasons, the one would have offset the other, but the hard times had made people unwilling to buy, while creditors were clamoring for their money. Sadie's father was beginning life over again, and Sadie was going to help him, as she told her friend.

"I'm studying stenography, and I'm pretty sure of getting a position by fall. I shan't earn much at first, you know, but at least I won't have to ask father for money for my clothes."

She was very brave about it, and sweet and cheery. Ernestine went on her way thrilled with admiration.

Sadie finished her course in about four months, and secured a position. In less than a month she was again an applicant. Ernestine found it hard to keep track of her during the next few months, for Sadie was continually changing.
And then one day she telephoned the news that she was going to try a different kind of work.

"I'm not suited to business, anyway," she explained over the wire. "Everything's too out and dried for me. I've got a position now as Mrs. Vance's secretary. I know I shall love it. She's just too dear for anything."

Another month passed. Then late one afternoon Ernestine called at Sadie's home and was told Sadie was in. Sadie's voice speaking from the top of the stairs, confirmed that statement.

"Yes, I'm here. Come on up," Ernestine ascended with a rush, and the girls kissed each other.

"I wasn't sure I should find you in," said the caller. "How late does Mrs. Vance keep you?"

Sadie's answer was a deep, burning blush, and then as Ernestine stared, realizing confusedly that she had said the wrong thing, Sadie spoke out bluntly.

"I'm home now studying the spelling book. I've lost six positions because I didn't know how to spell. I thought business men were silly and over particular.
But when Mrs. Vance read a note I'd written with two mis-spelled words in it, she simply went to pieces. And before I start out again looking for a place, I shall be a good speller."

"But do you think you can learn?" Ernestine inquired, anxiously. She remembered that Sadie had been very positive on that point.

"Anybody can learn anything," replied Sadie, with a rather grim smile "who has as good a reason for it as I have."

Mrs. Newed—I would like a pound of your best cheese.
Grocer—Yes, ma'am.
Mrs. Newed (examining it)— Why, this cheese is full of holes.
Grocer—Yes, ma'am; that's the way it comes.

Mrs. Newed—Well, I don't want any of it. I'm not going to pay for a pound of cheese that contains a half pound of holes!

A COLD

Settled On Her Lungs
Causing Great Pain.

THE CURE WAS
Norway Pine Syrup.

Miss D. M. Pickering, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "Having derived great benefit from Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, I thought I would write and tell you of my experience. When I first came out from England I contracted a severe cold, owing to the change of climate.
It settled on my lungs, and caused me a great deal of pain. I tried every remedy I could think of, but got no relief. My father, who had heard a great deal about the good qualities of Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup, advised me to try it. I did so, and I am pleased to say, found immediate relief. I only took one bottle and it cured me completely. My mother had a severe cold also, and Dr. Wood's Norway Pine Syrup cured her, so we never fail to keep a bottle of it in the house."

See that none of those so-called "pine syrups" are handed out to you when you go to your druggist or dealer and ask for "Dr. Wood's." It is put up in a yellow wrapper, three pine trees the trade mark; price, 25c and 50c.

PALPITATION OF THE HEART.
Sudden fright or emotion may cause a momentary arrest of the heart's action, or some excitement or apprehension may set up a rapid action of the heart thereby causing palpitation.

Palpitation, again, is often the result of digestive disorders arising from the stomach, or may be the result of over-indulgence of tobacco or alcoholic drinks.
The only way to regulate this serious heart trouble is to use Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills.

Mrs. J. S. Nicholls, Listowell, Ont., writes: "I was weak and run down, my heart would palpitate and I would take weak and dizzy spells. A friend advised me to try Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills, so I started at once to use them, and found that I felt much stronger. I cannot praise my medicine too highly, for it has done me a world of good."

Milburn's Heart and Nerve Pills are 50c per box, 3 boxes for $1.25, at all dealers, or mailed direct by The T.

Easy to use, requires no tools and mends quickly Every housewife knows what it is to discover a hole in a pan, kettle or boiler just when she wants to use that article.
Few things are more provoking and cause more inconvenience, a little leak in a much wanted pot or pan will often spoil a whole morning's work.

The housewife has, for many years been wanting something with which she could herself, in her own home, mend such leaks quickly, easily and permanently, and she has never found it.

What has been needed is a mender like "VOL-PEEK." that will repair the article neatly and quickly and at the same time be always at hand, easily applied and inexpensive.

A package of "VOL-PEEK" will mend from 30 to 50 air sized holes.

"VOL-PEEK" is in the form of a stiff putty, simply cut off a small piece enough to fill the hole, then Burn the mend over the flame of a lamp, candle or open fire for two minutes, then the article will be ready for use.
