Number Two Education Committee Decides to Shelve Two of His Requests.

Five members of No. 2 Committee—
Trustees Turner (chairman), Cook, Durdin, Childs, Brady and Secretary Abbott—met last evening and proceeded to talk over the business. Several accounts were passed and ordered paid, and then the petitions of the several applicants for the positions of school janitors were taken up, but after a few minutes' deliberation they were filed for future reference.

Janitor Jury's account of $7 for services rendered at the High School during the examinations was read. The account was thrown out, as the janitor's salary covered such services.

A communication was read from Messra.

J. H. Chapman & Co., offering the Board a bell for St. It was decided to purchase the bell and have it erected at the Lorne avenue school. It was also decided to remove the bell from the Central school to the Colborne street school.

Trustee Durdin called attention to the state of the flues at the Hamilton road school. He said he had undertaken to show the man in charge how to clean out the flues of the Smead system and had his knuckles skinned, at which the man only laughed. The speaker was sure there was something radically wrong.

Trustee Cook suggested that the aggrieved trustee should keep his knuckles out of the flues.

Superintendent of Smead, Down & Co.

The letter was referred to the Engineer with instructions to see that the specifications of the work are carried out.

The petition of Janitor Jury, asking to have the blackboards done over at the Collegiate Institute, was read.

Trustee Brady—Jury wants to run the whole Board. Give him the earth, gentlemen. I am sick of him. If you give him something every time the Board meets he will never be satisfied.

Trustee Childs recorded himself as in favor of doing the work if necessary, but someone besides Janitor Jury must say that it is necessary. 'I never noticed that the boards were out of repair, did you?' said the bewildered trustee, appealing to the rest of the Board. The other members all agreed that they had noticed nothing, so the matter was dropped.

Trustee Durdin called attention to the defective belirey in the Hamilton road school, which allowed the rain to enter. It was left to Trustee Durdin to see that the necessary repairs were made. The committee then adjourned to meet on Tuesday next.
