"I believe you are right, mother," Max nswered, gravely; "and there are even other circumstances which go to prove the whole thing was cunningly contrived. We both know that Laura had intended to wear that gray dress that came the day before the reception; but, instead, the suddenly changes her mind and attires herself in white, which Agnes was also to wear. What could have been her motive but to deceive me when she should meet me on the balcony? Another thing: Laura always uses attar of roses as a perfume; last night there was the scent of heliotrope about her, and we know that Agnes always uses that."

He felt almost faint as he remembered how plainly he had distinguished this when his lips had touched her halr. Oh, what a miserable affair it was!

"Mother," he continued, growing startlingly pale with anger and shame, "I am convinced that it was a plot from beginning to end, laid for my unwary feet, trap me into a proposal of marriage.

"The whole affair has a suspicious look, I am forced to admit," Mrs. Remington gravely replied. "Still, Max, I am unable to understand how you could have been so deceived. I should suppose that you would have at least recognized her voice."

Max flushed hotly. He wondered at himself now for having been so completely duped. Max flushed hotly. execution her purpose of going to Agnes the day following the conversation just related, for she herself was taken ill during the night, and was unable to rise the next morning.

She told Max, however, that it was only a slight cold—she would be better in a day or two; but the day or two only served to develop a fever, and it was three weeks before she was able to rise o pen a note to explain anything to Agnes.

Max, however, had made two more efforts to see Agnes during this time, but had been coldly refused an audience both times. Then, in despair, he wrote out a full explanation of all that had occurred on the evening of his mother's reception, but his letter was returned to him unopened, and he was obliged to accept his fate, believing that Agnes already knew the worst, and would never forgive him.

During the three weeks of Mrs. Remington's illness the young girl was hav-ing a great deal of trouble. She had found her mother very ill upon her return from Mrs. Remington's re-ception, and she suffered continual selfreproach for having left her at all.

But Mrs. Walton appeared to rally after a day or two, and they all thought that the worst was over and she would soon be as well as usual again.
It was a false hope, however, for, after a week of ups and downs, her disease suddenly developed alarming symptoms, and in another week she was dead. and in another week she was dead.

He relieved Agnes of every possible care, cheering, soothing and comforting her with almost a father's tenderness; and when at last her mother was called away, and the brave girl broke down utterly, he took all matters into his own heard, and arranged everything for her hands, and arranged everything for her in the kindest and most considerate manner possible.

She was both grieved and hurt, too, that Mrs. Remington had never been to see her; had sent her no word of sympathy or condolence during her trouble. She found herself growing strangely morbld over all this, and finally, arousing herself, she resolved that she would not weakly grieve over what she could not help.

Malt Breakfast Food

For Nourishing and Making the Little Ones Happy.

The proper feeding and nourishing of the child just after weaning should engage the most serious attention of the mother. The great majority of prepared foods produce irritation of the stomach and bowels, because of their improper and unscientific manufacture. This irritation of the digestive organs develops into serious complications that often prove fatal.

Malt Breakfast Food is the ideal health food for our little ones. It is entirely free from starchy substances, easily digested and assimilated, is richer in flesh and bone producing elements than all other foods, and has a deliciousness that at once captivates the taste of every child. If you desire to see your child grow up strong, try the effects of Malt Breakfast Food for a few weeks, and note well the grand results. Your Grocer can supply you.

"PLAY BALL."

"Play ball!" The old cry echoes o'er the peaceful vale of Cherry Creek, and from the bleachers comes a roar as rows of rooters spring a leak! The batter grasps the willow club, the pitcher strikes an attitude, the catcher gives his hands a rub, the umpire stands with keen eyes glued upon the play; the ball has gone, and once again the season's on!

Way up the telegraph pole the eager small boy perches high, and in the fence each knotty hole—and they are many—frames an eye. The score card merchant's voice rings out, the voice through all the winter dumb, the peanut vendors loudly shout, the kid proclaims his chewing gum, and that same cushion man is there to save our pantalettes from wear.

The knocker with his noisy knock, the kicker with his mulish kick, the talker with his bally talk upon the seats as flies are thick. The ladies in their smart attire, enthusiasm in their eyes, are there in bevies to admire and laud the players to the skies, and spank their dainty hands when one of handsome figure makes a run.

The old excuses now are fed to bosses from employes' lip. The grandma on her dying bed, the wife at home down with la grippe. That dying grandma will be spied beside her grandson sitting there; the sick wife by her husband's side, and how those frauds will blush and stare to catch their old employer's eyes lit up with half-amused surprise!

The game is on, the season's here, the "PLAY BALL."

NEW GUIDE ISSUED.

Spalding's Official Baseball Guide for 1992, just published is the largest publication of its kind ever attempted, containing 368 pages. The book, as usual, is edited by the veteran Henry Chadwick, "the Father of Baseball." The contents of the chapters on the National League include articles on the National League contests from 1876 to 1901, the 25 year pennant race records; ten years' history of the league, from 1891 to 1901; records of the monthly campaigns of 1901; a fiften years' history of the Pitts. history of the league, from 1891 to 1901; records of the monthly campaigns of 1901; a fifteen years' history of the Pittsburg club; club team averages and the pitching of 1901, with records of the pitchers and official averages for 1901. The American League season of 1901 is reviewed very thoroughly, each club given, together with a list of the players in the league signed up to March 5, 1902. The official rules are presented in a more attractive form than ever before, being interspersed throughout with explanatory paragraphs wherever a possibility of paragraphs wherever a possibility of misinterpretation could occur: in addition to which, the rules of the various leagues are given where their codes differ. HAVE YOU NOTICED THIS? Probably half the spectators who attend ball games have vaguely wondered and perhaps ask neighbors why a batsman often picks up two bats and swings them several times about his head while waiting for his turn at bat. Seldom is waiting for his turn at bat. Seldom is the correct answer given, and the practice often is looked upon merely as a habit. George Davis, of the White Stockings explains the perfectly logical theory as follows: "After swinging two bats for several seconds the player's own bat seems much lighter as he faces the pitcher, and he feels this is likely to help him in hitting the ball. Players who use heavy sticks are more frequently the ones who try the plan, although this is by no means a general rule."

ATHLETICS.

The remarkable strength test record of N. W. Willard, of the School of Philosophy, Columbia, in the university gymnasium, is still the talk of the 'varsity, and the school of the 'varsity, and 'varsity, a nasium, is still the talk of the varsity, and of other colleges where physical development is regarded as quite as important as a knowledge of humanity and as a glimmering of Greek. Willard scored 1,827, eclipsing the former record held by Harold Weekes by 118 points. Willard's achievement was all the more remarkable from the circumstance that remarkable from the circumstance that the year before his standard was only 1,268, and that between the tests of 1901 and 1902, he had developed to such an extent as to increase his strength at all points by 559. Columbia's new strong man is an all-round athlete. Last spring he took an active part in baseball, and made the regular third base in the 'varsity. From an observation of the records it will be seen that in one year Willard's development of the leg and back lift alone increased 40 points, while that of the dips and chins increased 200. His friends attribute this remarkable development to Willard's strenuous exercise at football, and they point to Weekes and Morley as other notable illustrations.

Willard himself attributes his great strength to the fifteen minutes' dumbbell and Indian club exercises that he engages in before supper every night. The exercise is light, but it is regular. The Stratford Turf Association has made arrangements with the G. T. R. to made arrangements with the G. T. R. to run an excursion from London each day of the local races, and from Goderich on the first day, July 1. The trains will leave London about 12:25. Both these and that from Goderich will stop at all intermediate points. The rates will be greatly reduced, and will, no doubt, prove a big inducement to sportsmen along the line of the excursion, for the Stratford races are known to be on a par with any in the province. OTTO WONDERLY.

Speaking about Otto Wonderly's riding on Wednesday, the New York Telegraph says: "The other races were won by Cochran, who is riding well: White. Wonderly and L. Smith. Wonderly and L. Smith had the best of the horse in The Referee and Candling. There was cosiderable criticism of Wonderly's riding at Bennings. That he can ride a welligidged race and a good finish is welling at Bennings. That he can ride a well-judged race and a good finish is well-known. Racing people who saw him ride last season were unanimous in the opinion that he would make a good jockey. They are waiting for him to cut loose and show his ability."

WONDERLY PULLED DOWN. New York, April 17.—Mars Cassidy, the starter, took a fall out of Jookey Wonderly at the post in the third race. Woderly was up on J. E. McDonald's St. Florian colt. Reeves, and did not seem able to keep him under control. Finally he let him go through the barrier, and when he came back Cassidy said:

"That'll be about two days for you, Wonderly." Wonderly."
So Wonderly will not be seen in the saddle again this side of Saturday.

WRESTLING. There will be a big crowd in Buffalo tonight, when Dan McLeod, the Hamilton wrestler, and Jim Parr will get together. Parr is an Englishman, and about the best man that has ever come over to this country. The match is for a side stake of $2,000, and McLeod agrees to throw the Englishman three times in an hour or forfeit the cash. If Parr throws McLeod even once he will take ws McLeod even once he will take SHELBURNE APPARENTLY MAD. Shelburne, April 17.—The Dauntless Lacrosse Club are highly indignant at the way they were treated by the senior committee of management in Toronto on Monday night. It is quite evident that a determined effort is being made by several of the senior teams to freeze the Dauntless club out, and in the case of two of the senior teams the main object is to secure Dauntless players. Paddy is to secure Dauntless players. Paddy Kelly, who represented the Dauntless at the meeting on Monday night, did not withdraw the club from the senior ranks. but only from the district to which the club was assigned, a district in which it would be unfair to ask Shelburne to play on account of the distance ed. What business have Orangeville and Shelburne in different districts, when the towns are only sixteen miles apart? The Dauntless are out to play senior, and will play senior or not at all. Why should London or Woodstock, new teams, without even an intermediate record, be admitted to senior ranks, and the Dauntadmitted to senior ranks, and the Dauntless, who won the right to play senior in 1900, and played senior in 1901, be side-tracked? Would not the fellowing grouping appeal to the common sense of any seasonable person as being an unselfish and fair distribution of the clubs: District No. 1—Orangeville, St. Catharines, Tecumseh, Shelburne, District No. 2—Brantford, London, Paris, Galt, Woodstock?

NOTES. The attitude of the club's representa-tives at the senior committee in Toronto on Menday, will be taken up at a meet-ing of the executive this evening.

THE great lung healer is found in that excellent medicine sold as Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup. It soothes and diminishes the sensibility of the membrane of the throat and air passages, and is a sovereign remedy for all coughs, colds, hoarseness, pain or soreness in the chest, bronchitis, etc. It has cured many when supposed to be far advanced in consumption.

THE GREATEST OF SPRING MEDICINES.

In the spring the system is so overloaded with impurities that the organs are unable to properly eliminate the waste matter.

is of the the greatest value in cleansing internally, just as soap and water cleanses externally.

It flushes the sewers of the body, awakens the torpid organs and renews activity, pure blood is pumped to all parts of the body, thereby cleansing, purifying and strengthening it.

Bon't stay sick, weak, tired and listless this spring. Take Burdock Blood Bitters and feel bright, healthy and vigorous. It turns Bad Blood into Rich Red Blood.
