"Tonsilitis" Tommy Ryan has broken loose again, and is issuing defis to everything that wears boxing gloves. Tommy says he wants to do battle, and he doesn't care with whom he scraps. Jack O'Brien can have a bout at 154 pounds, ringside, and the Philadelphia real estate merchant will prob ably cut off his left leg (to make the weight) and sign up. Ryan makes more noise and fights fewer real battles than any man who ever held a pugilistic title. Men like Dave Barry are Tommy's favorite opponents. When it comes to meeting a good man Sir Thomas demands conditions which make the match an impossibility. When signing up for one bout this "champion" Ingersell Kiddies Took Scalps Northern Curlers Were Run- Eccentric Ossie Insists on Ecwanted his opponent to agree not to hit him in the stomach. When he met Kid McCoy at Syracuse he had it fixed with the police to stop the bout as he (Ryan) was making a spurt. He has had but one fight in two years or more, and that was in the nature of an exercise bout, for Ryan can whip two Barrys in the same ring. And marks are what Thomas is always looking for, as his record shows. The last five bouts he engaged in, previous to the Barry affair, were with Jack Beauscholte (whoever he is), Bob Douglas (from the land of the unknown), Tom Wallace (same place), and Billy Stift, the Chicago punching-bag. In discussing Ryan's last bout, the Washington (D. C.) Post says:

A majority of western critics now allege that Tommy Ryan and Dave Barry were working what is known as the "lemon" game down at Hot Springs the other night. It appears that Tommy awoke too late.
