The last day of November or the explain the differences in their lanfirst of December is a sort of Pisgah guage? height from which the promised Christmas lying low at the winter solstice may now easily be seen. It is time to decide on the strategy and of pelled to face the school question and of speak with one voice, not several. tactics, get into the final pink training, arrange the commissariat of the strenuous but joyous expedition. "On bacons, on!" as Falstaff said. tario Government is bifacial.

The first week of December is the time to arrange for a Christmas tree, the spruce itself, the candles and tinsel, the candy-bags and all the elfin things from Lapland. If the wonders are intended for somebody else's home, send them now. Let the postmen and the trainmen carry all the loads possible before the 20th, and don't crowd it all into "the last awful week," to Gill University in a fortnight. As to quote an election phrase. Would it the Western University, Londoners not be a good plan to buy up so clean, havebefore the Christmas week, that the shops in desperation would be advertising January bargains on the 21st?

In the summer the toy-makers were ful thing, unlike anything in heaven, at work, the card-designers and calendar artists made their preparations, and all fall the stores have been getting ready. Now the consumer with his wintry smile may gird himself betimes, not to pave the nether regions with some more good resolutions, but howled Mr. Asquith down, should have actually to put on the Christmas spirit reverenced the place, if not the Preof goodwill by "shopping early." There is a host of people to remember, not their cause. Mrs. Pankhurst can prove only those who are to be boxed, but an alibi this time. those who sell, tie up, or deliver for Santa Claus. Remember the tired saleswoman, and lighten her last week, Think of that wild snowstorm that | will come a day or two before Christmas to wear out men and block the roads to motor-car and beast.

All pleasures worth the having are dear to purchase. Christmas, like the Promised Land, means effort and expense, which need to be planned a good way ahead for the best results o everybody concerned. The improvident give more trouble to the world share the plunder. Occasionally, howthan the criminal. Why not be fore-handed? "The devil take the hind-another, instead of the ground. The handed? His pre-eminence in this respect has marked him out for recognition. If he demanded a reward, it would not be denied him by a premier who has refused the Nationalists nothing. When Dr. Reaume asserts that Mr.

The Attorhe shows a curious conception of ministerial responsibility. The Attorney-General's conception is equally curious if he also imagines that he spoke only for himself. Mr. Foy took pains to put his statement in writing, and everyone at the time regarded his utterance as the reasoned and settled to the Government, the official interpretation of the school law by the head of the legal administration of the province.
