SAMUEL GURR'S MURDER.

"statute" (he probably meant "stature" or "height") and he looked like him in the back. He could not identify his clothes, although he was dressed conspicuously in white overalls and vest, such as plasterer's laborers wear. Neither could he identify his face; he went alone by his size. He wrote down that the man who struck "the murdered man," as witness always termed him, "ran quick away and he could only see his back." When it came to the identification of the woman, witness wrote down that she was "dressed in a dark flat hat with feathers, dark jacket and a printed dress." The women prisoners were all stood together, and witness the could not pick out any of them as rested a great deal of excitement in St. John's ward, and yesterday and last night it was the sole topic of conversation in the streets contiguous to the scene of the crime. The murder is still enveloped in mystery. The county attorney and Detective Reburn have a "theory," but as yet there is very little to connect any of the persons detained in custody with the infliction of the fatal stab on Curr's neck. It was expected that the deaf mute, George B. Broomfield, was to give very important testimony, but when it is taken into consideration that probably by disusage he has forgotten the meaning.

The prisoners John Falvey, William Neal, Mary Cross, Hattie Jeffreys, Georgian Woods and Minnie O'Brien were arraigned in a row outside the railing and listened attentively to the evidence. None of them were represented by counsel, and only two of them, John Falvey and Hattie Jeffrey, ventured to indulge in any cross-examination.

Jeffrey, ventured to indulge in any cross-examination.

Mrs. Elliott and her daughter, aged 11, and John Cole, jr,, were the first witnesses examined. Mrs. Elliott keeps the boarding-house at 150 Elizabeth street where the murdered man, William Neal and John Falvey stopped. Neither her or her daughter could say whether Falvey was out of the house or not Monday night after supper. Their evidence was unimportant. John Cole, jr., testified that he retired to bed at 11 o'clock Monday night. He and his father slept in the same room with Falvey and Jim Neal, brother of the prisoner, William Neal. When he got to the room, the murdered man, Falvey and Neal were talking together. Falvey was lying on the outside of the bed with his clothes on. They were all drunk. Curr got up and said he was going out. Witness told his father not to mind him, but to let him go where he liked. Witness and his father then fell asleep and he did not awake until he was called by Mrs. Elliott next morning, when she told them that Curr had gone-out and got murdered. Drs. Pillbrick and Macdonald, who made a post-mortem examination of the remains, were next examined. Dr. Phill-rick and Macdonald, Dr. Phill-rick and Macdonald, Who made a post-mortem examination of the remains, were next examined. Dr. Phill-rick examined. Dr. Phill-brick described the wound very minutely to the jury, and pointed out the exact lo-calities of the different arteries on his own calities of the different arteries on his own neck, but owing to venerable doctor's flowing locks of silvery hair covering his hands and the indicated spot of the wound, it is not likely that the jurymen were much enlightened by this portion of the evidence. Dr. Phillbrick could not say with what kind of a cutting the wound was made or how long cutting the wound was made, or how long it was inflicted before the man died. He could not swear that the man could receive such a wound in front of 118 Edward street and walk to where he was found without troops. The new mahdi says El Mahdi assistance. However, he said that he once knew of a woman who cut her throat ports that seven Italian priests and four from ear to ear and ran from one room to another for a long time before she dropped. Taglioni's Memoirs.
PARIS, May 28.—Prime Minister Ferry said the bloed on the fence against which the body was lying looked as if it had been there two hours. He would not attempt to say how long before the man's death the would was inflitted. Witness could not say whather a man having such a tround will not consider the claim for the memoirs of Mme. Taglioni which were found desay whether a man having such a wound could walk unassisted from 118 Edward posited with a notary of Marseilles, and

Mr. Broomfield then took the stand. Mr. Broomfield then took the stand. Witness is an elderly many who described himself as a stockman in the employ of King & Brown, shoe manufacturers. Mr. Broomfield is said to have possessed a thorough knowledge of the common English phraseology at one time, but he has forgotten a good deal of it. For instance, he did not know what the words "long" or "describe" or Mr. Shaw of Tamatave. LONDON, May 28.-Rev. His story, as understood by the coroner and Mr. Fenton and explained by them to the jury, was that at a quarter to 4 on Tuesday morning—he was positive of the time as he consulted both his watch and clock of property and his personal losses at the time of the bombardment of Tamatave. THE PENN BANK FAILURE

A SHORTAGE OF OVER A MILLION DISCOVERED. Fictitious Accounts—A Heavy Defalcation Reported—The Thing Going On For

PITTSBURG, May 28.—Examination of the books of the Penn bank thus far shows a shortage of over a million. The indications are that the bank's liabilities are over two millions, and that the depositors will not get 5 per cent. The concern has been completely gutted. Capitalists like Vanderbilt have been made to masquerade on the ledgers for parties who drew money out of the bank in some unknown way. The bank has been losing steadily for three years. The stealing dates back to the time of the Cherrygrove oil excitement. President Riddle has filed a confession of judgment in favor of the directors for $99,000.

The deficiency still grows and this evening reached $1,260,000. Heavy defalcations are also hinted at which it is claimed will reach nearly a million. The directors will reach nearly a million. The directors have been in session all day and have decided to have a thorough investigation into the whole matter and a full statement fur-the whole matter and a full statement furnished the public. If wrong has been done by any one he shall be made to pay the penalty. Many of those who made deposits Friday threaten the bank officials with criminal proceedings for false pretences in obtaining money.

Cashier Reiber is now under police surveillance. President Riddle is much better to-night. He will probably be strong enough to come to the city to-morrow.

The Pennsylvania mutual protective association, organized a few years ago for the object of insuring the lives of its members, is now believed to have been primarily designed to bring grist to the Penn bank in the shape of the collection of assessments the shape of the collection of assessments where deaths occurred.
