A Marriage Deferred. Sr Louis, Mo., Nov. 19.-Bdward Amiens was about to be wedded to Mrs. Laura Carroll at St. Nicholas' church in this city yesterday, when a girl of slight figure, with streaming hair and weeping igure, with streaming har and weeping eyes, entered and said: "Don't marry him; don't marry him, please 1 He is my hus-band." The bride fainted and the groom turned pale. The priest looked dumb-founded, and the girl centinued: "He be-trayed me under plomise of marriage, and only last week said we should be married of their traves and now he is going to take at Christmas, and now he is going to take someone else. He is killing me." By this time the bride had revived, and throwing time the bride had revived, and throwing her arms bysterically around the groom, cried, "No one shall take him away; I'll have him, anyhow." Father Schafer would not proceed with the ceremony until he consulted his superiors. The groom acknowledged the truth of the girl's statement, but it is said he went before a instore a subsequently and married Mrs. justice subsequently and married Mrs.

EPISCOPALIAN MISSIONS.

The board of management of the home and foreign missionary society of the church of Eugland in Canada met in the synod rooms, Merchants bank buildings, Wellington street yesterday afternoon. A large representation was present, including delegates from the various parts of the dominion. Bishop Sweatman occupied the chair. The principal business trans. acted was the adoption of a plan for the division of missionary monies at the disposal of the society. The funds were appropiated according to the needs of the various schemes supported or in contemplation by the society. St. James' school house was packed to the doors last night by an assembly of nearly 1000 people, the occasion being a mass missionary meeting under the auspices of the Church of England Missionary society. Among those on the platand T. B. Keed of London and others. Bishop Sweatman presided. In his opening remarks he stated that the meeting was not an ordinary one. It was not a parochial but a truly missionary one in the broadest serve of the word. They had a real missionary present, Rev. F. Alexander of Madras, India, who was over the affair. All of the goods found in Garner's house in Hamilton were stolen in Toronto and are the property of Toronto merchants. The chief at Hamilton was notified by our city detectives that Garner was the very man wanted and posted him in every way as to his movements. Garner had so cleverly distributed the stolen goods in this city that it was im-possible to catch him and the Toronto police knew that he would move them to Hamilton. Then, because Chief Stewart made the arrest himself at Fort Erie, he refuses to turn Garner over to the Toronto officers. The merchants who lost their goods will be compelled to go to Hamilton to identify them and give evidence against Garner, whereas by all existing police rules he should be brought to this city for trial. native population were students in any parts missionaries' schools alone. In many parts the gospel was preached by native clergy-men. The rev. missionary gave a graphic description of the perils, successes and vicis-situdes of missionary life in India. He believed that the work there depended to a great extent on christian education. In ten years' work the converts had increased from 69,000 to 104,000. Even then they were only piercing the dense mass of idola-try in the land. The field was enormous. They had 104 native ministers and a large array of catechists and others who helped on the work. Concluding he said: God was going to give India to us and the light of the gospel would spread to other countries in the vicinity. Thomas White, M.P., the next speaker, stated the objects fer which the church of England missionery society was formed. One of the main difficulties the church had to contend against was diocesan, and even

One of the main difficulties the church had to contend against was diocesan, and even congregational jealousy. To avoid this the missionary society had been formed, and it was doing its work well. Its field was a large and important one. The opening up of the great Northwest opened up an immense field for missionary enter-prise. Other denominations were doing a good work there, and why should the church of England be second to any? This was the first time the church in this province had struck out from its diocesan bitterness and entered boldly on this great not believed by those who know the gentle-man accused. J. W. christian missionary work as rooting up the old pagan institutions. There were no pagan morques building now. They were moss grown, but the temples of Christ were going up all over the world. The present, he believed, was one of the three great missionary ages in the church. The first was the apostles, the second the great reformation, and third that of our own time. There were other gospels in the world that could equal that of Christ. There was the gospel of commercial suc-cess, but in this human progress or intel-lectual refinement had not been sufficient to keep down the passions of the human heart and soothe them into an abiding rest. The "gospel of despair" er the in-telligent freethinking gospel was also un-sati factory.
