On Sunday morning at 3 o'clock the street door was tried, and everything was found all right. At 3.30 the door was again tried and found open, and the watchman mounting to the first floor saw that a determined attempt had been made to force the door directly communicating with the jewelry warshouse. A jimuy had been inserted in the space between the heavy iron lock and the door post. Big silvers of wood had been torn away, but the resistance was too great to permit of an entrance being forced. The burglars had evidently timed the watchmen, and finding the half-hour about spent fled without further work. The last affair, taken with the recent attempts on the jewelry stores of Kent Bros. and John Wanless, goes to show that there is a bad gang in the city looking out for a haul of jewelry.
