

You'll enjoy the Winter through all its varying moods if you have your clothing interlined with Fibre Chamols. This wonderful fabric is so light that you never notice its presence in a garment till you get out into the wind and cold, then you realize that you are cozily warm even tho' lightly clad. Fibre Chamols is a complete non-conductor of heat and cold, not the strongest wintry blast can penetrate it, nor can the natural warmth of the body escape through it—This explanation and the fact that it sells for 25c a yard gives the whole story, and easily proves that for health and comfort's sake you can't do without it.

Hamilton, Jan. 7th, 1895.
THE GURNEY-TILDEN CO., LTD.
Dear Sirs.—In reply to yours of 11th, I have been using your "Souvenir" Range all Fall and Winter, and am delighted with it. I keep fire going day and night, and it gives positively no trouble. The oven works beautifully, is a perfect baker, and will give a roasting heat in five minutes at any time. It consumes on an average 1 1/2 scuttles of coal in 24 hours. The "Souvenir" is to my belief the zenith of perfection.
Yours truly,
NETTIE CUTTRISS.

Messrs. GURNEY-TILDEN CO., LTD.
Gentlemen,—I have much pleasure in saying that the "Souvenir" Range you put in at Hamilton for the use of the Cooking Class recently held there gave me every satisfaction. It is certainly the very best stove I have ever used, being cleanly, reliable and most economical, consuming an astonishingly small quantity of fuel.
I have the honor to remain yours sincerely,
FLORENCE HURKIDGE,
Principal Toronto Cooking School.

STARVED TO DEATH

in midst of plenty. Unfortunate, yet we hear of it. The Gail Borden Eagle Brand Condensed Milk is undoubtedly the safest and best infant food. Infant Health is a valuable pamphlet for mothers. Send your address to the New York Condensed Milk Company, New York.

The French papers relate that Abdul Hamid, Sultan of Turkey, has French blood in him and is distantly connected with the Bonaparte family. A Mlle. de Rivery, cousin and playmate of Josephine Tascher de la Pagerie, who afterward became Empress of France, was wrecked off the coast of Algiers while returning from Marseilles to Martinique. A passing ship saved her, but this vessel fell into the hands of the Algerine pirates, and the lady was sold as slave. The Bey of Algiers presented her to Abdul Hamid I., to whom she bore a son, Mahmoud II., grandfather of the present Sultan.

FADS IN MEDICINE.

There are fads in medicine as in every thing else and a "new thing" frequently sells for a short time simply because it is new. But in medicine, as in nothing else, the people demand and will be satisfied only with positive, absolute merit. The fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has stood its ground against all competition, and its sales have never wavered but have remained steadily at the top, demonstrates, beyond any doubt, the intrinsic virtues of this medicine. The new things have come and gone, but Hood's Sarsaparilla rests upon the solid foundation of absolute merit and its power to cure, and its sales continue to be the largest in the world.

The French are altogether like themselves in the wild delight they are showing at being visited by the Czar of all the Russias and Czarina. They illustrate what has already been seen from time immemorial, man's tendency not to hero-worship, for the Czar is not a hero, but to worship rank, and great name even though it be only hereditary. How or why is it? Except this, the young man who finds himself at the head of one of the vastest empires in the world, and the object of all this adulation and extravagant display, has no claim to distinction beyond that he is the son of his father and has married a Princess who appears to be amiable and attractive in a more than ordinary degree. The poor Czar himself seems rather to be pitied than anything else; not strong in health or physique, wearied with a round of exciting and exhausting public functions, weighed down with the cares and responsibilities of his high station and public affairs of great moment, it appears as if he would soon be crushed beneath the load he is carrying, unless some relief comes to him before very long. We can fancy him and his royal wife, amid the splendors and deafening huzzas of Paris, looking back with longing and wistful desire to the quiet domestic life of Balmoral, praying for that love which at this time they have seen springing forth spontaneously towards our Queen from the hearts of a loyal, loving people.

Reliable estimates show, it is said, that during the present century four millions of people have been baptized from among the heathen, but during that time the heathen peoples have increased two hundred millions. There are eight hundred millions on earth to-day who have never heard of Christ.

Dread, or at least dislike and suspicion of Russia, and perhaps not a little envy at the push and adventure of Russia and Russians wherever they come into close contact and competition with ourselves in Asia or Europe, have become almost a tradition, if not a second nature with many Englishmen in every part of their great empire. It is pleasant, therefore, and well for us to hear or read anything in a different strain, especially when this is founded upon full knowledge. In his most interesting book of travels entitled, "The Heart of a Continent," Captain Younghusband, writing of a Russian merchant he met in Manchuria, says: "It is always a pleasure to meet a Russian. He is invariably so frank and hearty. No one would ever accuse a Russian of not being warm-hearted, and to a stranger in a strange land this merchant was particularly so."

I like to record these little acts of kindness and consideration which I have received from Russians individually, because I believe there are no two nations that would take to each other more than the Russians and ourselves, if the opportunity were forthcoming, and the more the members of each nation know each other the better it would be for us both."

OLD WAR HORSE.

A Grand Army Man Crosses Swords with Heart Disease and Wins a Glorious Victory With the Aid of Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart.

Dr. Agnew's Cure for the Heart can not be over estimated, says H. M. Musselman, a well-known G.A.R. man of Weissport, Pa., and he continues: "My ailments were palpitation and fluttering of the heart. I used two bottles of your valuable cure and feel like a new man. I have taken bottles and bottles of other medicines without help. I introduce it to my friends at every opportunity possible. It is a great medicine. Inside of 30 minutes after the first dose I had relief."

In these days when Webster's speeches and his ideas about the country are so much quoted, this extract from a letter of Motley, the historian, written from Dresden to a friend in Boston, in 1852, is interesting as showing his estimate of the great statesman:—"I have the greatest sympathy for you and the country for the loss of Daniel Webster. It is one which can never be made good to us. He was not only the greatest living statesman, but the greatest whom we ever produced in America, so much beyond all of them past and present in intellectual force, that it is hardly a compliment to speak of him as first among the political men of the country. Yet very little is known of him in Europe. On the continent few have ever heard his name. One literary old maid, who has written and published books, asked me if he was not one of our principal poets, and then when I laughed, confessed she had never heard of him. Yet she had lived fifteen years in England. The English had of course heard of him, and he was known to the statesmen; but nobody imagines that he was a personage to be compared to their great men, and probably not 100 men on the continent of Europe have ever read a line of his speeches, if indeed there be as many who knew that he ever made any. The fact is, no interest is felt in America or American institutions among the European public. America is as isolated as China. Nobody knows or cares anything about its men, or its politics or its conditions. . . . As for thinking of America without Webster, it seems like thinking of her without Niagara, or the Mississippi, or any other of the magnificent natural features which had belonged to her since I grew up, and seemed likely to endure forever."

Lasting Effects.

REV. HY. CARTER, Maddock, Springfield, P.E.I., wrote the following under date June, 1895.—"It is impossible for my wife to find words to praise your K.D.C. for what it has done for her. She suffered with water brash and awful distress, in fact, she was in misery all last winter, so much so, that she could not bear to have her clothes on, so I thought I would get her some K.D.C. Each dose seemed to tell, and long before she took two bottles she was cured, and can now eat anything."
This letter shows the great merit of K.D.C. and the following shows that its effects are lasting. Mr. Carter writes us July 31st, 1896, more than a year later. "Some time ago I sent you a letter testifying to the value of your wonderful K.D.C. to my wife. She is still enjoying good health, with no signs of her old trouble." Try it sufferers, K.D.C. PILLS are splendid for the liver and bowels.
