CITY OF HAMILTON

not attend the cabinet meeting today until President Wilson sent for him, rumors that the president had been unable to bring the secretary to his point of view filled the air. Finally, shortly before 6 o'clock, he news leaked out and was confirmed.

COULD NOT RECONCILE HIS POSITION. Just when the subject was first broached between the president and Mr. Bryan is not known definitely, but the fact that Mr. Bryan would resign was known to a small circle of officials as early as last Sunday. When the principles on which the note to Germany should be based were discussed at the cabinet meeting on Friday, Mr. Bryan found that he could not reconcile his own position with that of the administration. Work on the note went forward, however.

FINAL READING OF NOTE.

Today the cabinet assembled for a final reading of the note. Mr. Bryan was absent. At the White House no word as to the reasons for his failure to appear at the meeting were given, but after the cabinet had been discussing the note for an hour Mr. Bryan arrived, telling the newspaper men at the White House that he regretted being late.

It was learned tonight that with the knowledge that his resignation had already been accepted by the president, Mr. Bryan felt it would be indelicate to attend today's session unless his presence was desired by the president. When Mr. Wilson telephoned an invitation the secretary hurried to the White House. When the cabinet adjourned shortly after 1 o'clock Mr. Bryan entertained seven of his colleagues, all who could attend, at luncheon at the University Club. The luncheon was in the nature of a farewell

HIS POSITION EMBARRASSING. It came to light today that the position of Mr. Bryan in the cabinet recently has become very embarrassing—his advocacy of peace being so pronounced that other members of the cabinet who felt that the United States should assert its policy, irrespective of the consequences, were understood to have on one occasion declared their intention of resigning if a policy of firmness and vigor was not adopted. The real disagreement dates back to the famous session of the cabine when the note of May 13, following the sinking of the Lusitania, was drafted, informing Germany that the United States would not omit "any word or any act" to protect its rights. At that time Mr. Bryan made a speech counseling peaceful measures and cautious action. H gave his consent to signing the note only after it was tentatively arranged that a statement from the White House should be issued and transmitted to the German Government, announcing that inasmuch as Germany had accepted the principles of the peace treaties negotiated between the United States and other countries, differences between the two nations might be adjusted by a commission of investigation. Opposition to this course was most vehement in some cabinet quarters, and the president, after having considered at length Mr. Bryan's suggestion, finally disapproved it at the hour the note was sent. Some cabinet officers argued that such an appendix to the note of May 13 would be construed abroad as a weakening of the American position, and their counsel prevailed cabinet because of his desire not to embarrass the president by his opposition to the policy of the administration in the present foreign situation.

GOOD FEELING PREVAILS. Officials let it be known that Secretary Bryan determined to leave the

The utmost good feeling between the president and Mr. Bryan prevailed. While Secretary Bryan's attitude toward the situation which has arisen between the United States and Germany is not definitely known, it has been generally believed that he favored a note of the character which under no circumstances would involve the United States in grave compli-

Secretary Bryan's resignation is to take effect tomorrow, June 9 Robert Lansing, counsellor of the state department, automatically will become acting secretary of state, and in official circles the belief was generally expressed that Counsellor Lansing would be appointed to the office ad interim. Mr. Lansing is said to be in entire accord with the president's views on the ration's foreign policy.
OFFERED TO RESIGN BEFORE.

It became known only tonight that twice before in the two years and three months of his term Mr. Bryan had affered to resign so as to save the president from embarrassment, and each time the president refused to accept the resignation. Thruout the constant newspaper bombardment of Mr. Bryan for his views on peace, his advocacy of prohibition and his speeches on the Chautauqua, the president has stood by the secretary, resenting criticism of him.

In domestic affairs the two men co-operated most harmoniously. Often Mr. Bryan yielded some of his own views, and used his influence to assist the president's program in congress. It was not surprising, therefore, to officials and friends of the president and Mr. Bryan, to learn tonight that the latter continued undaunted in his support of the president politically, altho he could not remain in the cabinet and give him official help on a matter of principle which affected his entire philosophy of life.

Question of Transportation.

What is likely to be a matter of vital importance to Canadian prosperity in the future was brought to the notice of the forty-fourth annual general meeting of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association yesterday by Chas. B. Watts of Toronto Mr. Watts declared that extortionate ocean freight rates caused by war conditions threatened to prevent the splendid crop of Canadian wheat and grain which promises to be harvested this year from reaching the markets of Europe. He ex-pressed the fear that the United States pressed the fear that the United States with a much larger crop might corner the available supply of ships and that Canadian wheat might be side-tracked for lack of shipping facilities.

There was no reason, he declared, why the steamship companies should earn two and three times the profit more than the price per bushel which the farmers received. The Dominion Government, he believed, had confessed itself powerless to deal with the matter and he considered that the Manufacturers' Association might well consider what is to be done ander the circumstances. The ultimate circumstances. The ultimate success of the allies in the Dardanelles would release a large number of ships and they should see that Canada got them to move the crop.

J. H. Sherrard, who was occupying the chair at the time, called the attention of those present to the importance of what Mr. Watts had said, and it is likely that it will figure largely at today's meeting of the transportation committee.

Russia, which was not a very great factors. Russia, which was not a very great manufacturing country, would develop at a pace which has never been paralleled in the history of the civilized world. While the sentiment in other countries had necessitated "back-to-the-land" propaganda, 86 per cent. of the people of Russia were on the land and would remain there. Lacking what she wanted from England, she must turn to the United States and then to Canada for what Russia needed.

After outlining the present extent of Canadian manufacturing facilities, he declared that the war had cleared the way for Canadian export trade where it would not have been possible a year ago, and that the door was now open. Organization was all that was necessary to put Canadian manufacturers in touch with the markets where Canadian goods were required and the government, the railways, the banks and the manufacturers should co-operate to gain the advantage. The transportation matter was a vital one and it was up to the government to see that Canadian interests got their fair share of the ships that would be released when the operations at the Dardanelles were completed.

the operations at the Dardanelle J. M. Young emphasized the necessity for employers of labor to encourage enlistment. "Before this meeting closes," he said.
