TORONTO'S NEW SKY LINE—SPADINA AVENUE FROM THE DARLING BUILDING.

One of the last perils that would seem likely to befall travelers in a sleeping car, is being crashed into by a runaway trolley car. Yet this happened in Sioux City, Ia., recently. The sleeping car was standing on a railway crossing, and the motorman was unable to stop his car. It struck the railway car a square blow in the side and battered it a little. Nobody was injured.

MAKING OIL SMOKELESS

Some tests of oil at the Royal Experiment Station at Berlin have suggested that smoke abatement may be better accomplished by chemical than mechanical means. One portion of a commercial lubricating oil for motors was tested in its original state, and another portion of the same oil was first treated with acetone, dissolving the heavier constituents.

The treated oil, with unimpaired lubricating qualities, burned without smoke or troublesome odor. The original oil, however, emitted much smoke on burning, and the fumes were very irritating to eyes and nose.
