Satisfied that the spankings he has prescribed pretty frequently of late are being administered with good effect, day marked two other young auto thieves for the "strap." Louis Gentle, thieves for the "strap." Louis Gentle, who stole two autos, and several tires, was sentenced to eighteen months at the jail farm and to three spankings of five slaps each. The lad had previously served one year for a similar offence. Samuel Gertsbane, associated with Gentle on one of the charge sheets, denied that he had anything to do with stealing S. J. Wells' auto. He accepted Gentle's offer to give him a "lift" home. Gertsbane was convicted under the "joyriding" section of the act and paid a fine of $100 for using an auto without authority. The two lads were caught in a lane with the car, but Gentle escaped, although two shots were fired after him. Gerald Shearer was sentenced to one year and Lloyd Decker to one year and a spanking for the theft of W. E. Corman's auto.
