Mr. Edwards intends leaving for the prairie city on the 14th inst. Mr. Dodge's friends in Oxford county will be very sorry to hear of his illness, and will join with The Chronicle in wishing him the best.

THE SATURDAY MARKET.

The weekly Saturday morning market this week larger than has been the case for some time. The supply of butter was about the same as usual and sold for 23c and 25c. Eggs were more plentiful and in consequence were sold at a higher price. Some being as low as 8c by the basket. Dressed fowl was offered in large quantities and the prices were a little lower than last week. Good chickens were sold at from 50c to 55c per pair. The offering of vegetables was also very large.

The Trusts and Guarantee Company, Limited, 14 King street west, Toronto, accepts all classes of trusts, whether under will, marriage settlements, or agreement. As the company's perpetual existence its clients have the assurance that the terms of the trust will be carried out no matter what period they cover, without changing the trustee, which so often occurs when a private individual has been appointed in that capacity.

For a formal occasion or outing or business your suit ought to be perfect in fit and well made. A. W. Warren does it that way. Try him once.

THE WEATHER.

A DISHONEST QUOTATION.

In yesterday's issue The Chronicle contained the following paragraph:—

A St. Marys correspondent of the Stratford Beacon says: "A strong feeling has set in this district that the time has arrived to make another attempt by agitation and holding public meetings to try to have electric railway connection with Embro and Ingersoll, and there would be a number of villages intervening, there is every reason to believe that the investment would be a first-class paying one. Will Ingersoll or Embro make a move in the matter?"

The Woodstock Times copied the same paragraph, but in the eighth line "Woodstock" took the place of "Ingersoll," and in next to the last line "East Nissouri" was substituted for "Ingersoll."

Of course the correspondent in question did not know what he was writing about. The idea of St. Marys or any other town desiring connection with Ingersoll is perfectly absurd, and the editor of The Times simply reproduced the paragraph to indicate the manner in which it should have been written.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

There is still a scarcity of houses in the city. During the past week a number of families who intend to locate here have been forced to remain where they are for the present. One well known merchant said this morning that he would be forced to leave Ingersoll and run up and down the street cars, as he had failed completely in his endeavor to obtain a place to lay his head.—Woodstock Express.

Yes, it would be very nice to live in Ingersoll and run up and down on the street cars, but we fear if the "well known merchant" put that plan into operation he would be obliged, like the Israelites of old, to dwell in a tent. For the benefit of our contemporary let us whisper, vacant houses in Ingersoll are practically unknown. If he wants to take up his residence in a good live town, however, some of our capitalists could no doubt be induced to erect a modern and comfortable dwelling house for him.

NOTICE TO LADIES.

Ladies wanted to learn dress-making in two weeks; none but good sewers need apply. I will give $10 to any one that can show me an article in dress-making they can't make after learning. I have taught over seventy girls this way, offered $10 to each, but not one could take it. Is there any wonder that not half the girls that learn can even make a wrapper after they are through. When you learn and baste six months in a shop, then get from two to four hours on your system to begin with, and instead of sewers to begin with, you get six days from eight o'clock till six at night, not only your system but everything in dress-making. Every one can make a dress before paying. Ladies that I have taught have told me months after that they would not take $50 for what they learnt in the two weeks. Of course some people will say it can't be done. Well, the ones who have never learned don't know anything about it and the ones who have it and say it can't be done don't know as much as they ought to. I have taught girls who have started a week or two for themselves within a week or two after learning, and I have also taught quite a few that have been in shops making anything. Remember it won't cost you anything to try and if you will I will give you $10 for your trouble. I will teach in Ingersoll from the 2nd to 14th of September. All wishing to learn call at my rooms. First rooms upstairs, King street east from Richardson's jewelry store, on Saturday, Aug. 31st, from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m.

YOUR GUESTS.

It is considered quite the correct thing when one has guests from outside points to use the personal column of your newspaper to apprise friends and possibly acquaintances of the visitor of the fact. Many calls and exchanges of friendly greetings result, and the visit is made pleasant. The Chronicle will always be pleased to receive for insertion in its personal column such notices, and also of the departure of Ingersoll residents on vacation trips. Please remember, however, that the name of the contributor—if sent through the mail—must accompany all notices to ensure insertion.

ALL BETS OFF.

Two Irishmen went fishing, and before beginning operations they made a wager with each other as to who would make the biggest catch of fish. They had been fishing for about half an hour with little or no success, when Pat, who was standing, lost his balance, and fell off the pier. As Pat went headlong past Mike, the latter gave a yell, and said:—"Begorra, if ye are goin' to dive for 'em, the bet's off."

FASHIONS AT NEWPORT.

AFTERNOON DRESSES; EVENING GOWNS; OUTING SUITS.

Some really handsome afternoon dresses are in linen and a charming example is in blue, with bands of white on the short jacket, skirts, ends of sleeves and skirt below the waist. Blue embroidery appears on the white bands, in a shade darker than the dress and colors are chosen to suit the fair complexion and golden hair of a young Baltimore lady on a visit to one of the Vanderbilt families. Another dress of ecru batiste worn by a girl companion, is made with plain skirt, but finished by embroidery extending from the waist to the hem in front, growing narrow at the foot and widening around the top until it reaches the back. The long, tight sleeves are entirely over-laid by lace and the front of the corsage is lace covered below a yoke of shirred chiffon. The belt is of black velvet ribbon with long ends.

LACE WAISTS.

are seen perpetually and usually over taffeta silk, nor does anything impart a dressier finish than lace jackets that are noticeable on every hand. The gown may be plain, but should a lace jacket be worn with the same, a transformation to the handsomest is an immediate result. Evening dresses are greatly in evidence for evening gatherings, but of course are the exclusive choice of matrons, young aspirants wearing mouseline, net, in which point d'esprit is very popular, crepe de Chine or chiffon, the perishable nature of the last named, being no advantage in the eyes of Newport society.

PAINTED MOUSELINE.

composes some of the choicest gowns for evening and a member of the Astor family recently wore a delightful example showing a pattern of delicate wild roses. Such waists are certainly ravishing, but their delicacy that without exaggeration, they seemed dream-like—the suggestion of blossoms from some fairy land. The skirt was without other ornamentation, and completed around the bottom by three white chiffon ruffles. Delicate pointed touches appeared on the low corsage that was finished by chiffon ruffles, the short sleeves also being of chiffon.

AN AFTERNOON GOWN

worn on the drive, is of crepe de Chine in pale green, the lower part having wide encircling folds of green satin; the upper portion ending in a lace yoke and the elbow sleeves finished by lace. A row of lace appears around the skirt and two short lace panels extend from the waist on either side of the front. It is on the drive, however, that long coats are seen to greatest advantage and while the majority are in black taffeta silk, more or less trimmed by ecru or yellow lace, yet extremely stylish attaches to light tan cloth or more than all, white cloth. Colored silk cloaks are, of course, noticeable, and some quite lace covered.

OUT DOOR SPORTS

make up so much of Newport life that dresses in keeping, constitute of course an important quota and here the great popularity of linen becomes readily apparent. In view of the run on white, very many are in white linen, prettily trimmed in colors, though the attractive, gay hues in which linen has been brought out of late, come in for their share of patronage and the same can be said of material that is strawberry red, blue or green may vie with any material. Pique, duck, canvas or dress-making, every one can make a dress before paying. Ladies that I have taught have told me months after that they would not take $50 for what they learnt in the two weeks. Of course some people will say it can't be done. Well, the ones who have never learned don't know anything about it and the ones who have it and say it can't be done don't know as much as they ought to. I have taught girls who have started a week or two for themselves within a week or two after learning, and I have also taught quite a few that have been in shops making anything.
