When slumber seals these heavenly eyes,
And dreams of raptore round thee glow.
When angels watch, for angels lave
T. guard the pure from ils below.
Mine in that hour must keep the watch
Alone upon the midnight sea
As winds and waves with lated speed
Bear me away from home and thee.

Bear me away from home and thee.

Ves, mine shall fix their silent gaze.
Nor shrink if danger hover near;
This hand that trembles now in thine
Mark grasp the sword without a fear;
And for the missic of thy voice.
The stormy wave with shout of men.
For whispers soft, words stern and cold.
Must be the sounds that hall me then.

The hour has come, fresh blows the gale.
Our ship moves down you tide sfar,
Away, away beyond that tide
Thy image follows as a star;
Farewell to thee, farewell to all,
My intive land and skies above;
Oh, was will greet the wanderer now
With southing words or smiles of love?

Remember me, 'tis all Lask.

Remember me, 'tis all I ask,
When others gaze, when others sigh,
When others plead with bending knee,
And drink the beauty of thine eye.
Remember than, for e'en in dreams.
Though bright they come, this heart shall we
My thirsting sprift vanity seek
Thy image on the lonely deep.
