All along the line from the North Sea to the Vosges Moun-tains there is no flank for them to carry out their favorite enveloping movement, and the Germans are trying to create one by piercng the battle line in a frontal at-tack. The effort is being made to the south of Dixmude and, officials

"I consider it remarkable that our forces have done so well against the Germans. Not only do we appear to have held our lown, but it seems to me that the situation has already greatly chaged to our advantage during the past month. At the end of September the two armies faced each other along a straight line from Verdun to Compiegne. Success on our part would only have driven the enemy back a little, without leading to any great strategic result.

"Today, our front is a right angle, effecting an enveloping form. This is a manoeuvre justly cherished by the Germans. It is a movement which they applied with partial success to us at the beginning of hostilities.

and said he had taken the risks because he thought it was his highest duty to do so. He asked for a sentence less than death, but said if the full penalty were exacted Lody would face it like a man.

Lody met his death in the tower of London, after having been found guilty by a court martial on charges of having communicated with the enemy. The statement concerning the execution is brief, saying: "Sentence was duly confirmed."

It is understood that Lody died game, refusing to the last to reveal the name of the superior officer from whom he received his instructions to spy on the British navy.

This was the first execution in the tower of London since 1700. The scene of the execution was the tower barracks not far from the spot where Anne Boleyn and other persons famous in English history were put to death.

Lody was about twenty-eight years of age.

General French replied thanking. His Majesty for the message, which he said had been received with gratitude and pride by the army. He assured the King "of our unalterable determination to uphold the highest traditions of Your Majesty's arms and carry the campaign through to a victorious conclusion."

London, Nov. 10.—The Indian forces in France have made good, but have achieved none of the daring and early dealing and instincts have accustomed them to them, according to a statement issued by the Official Press Bureau tonight under date of November 10, written by "an observer with the Indian corps."

Above all the account emphasizes the difficulties under which the Indians are fighting by reason of their ignorance of the French, German and English languages. Repeatedly they have been subjected to tricks on the part of the Germans.

The Germans are full of resources, "says the account, "and it is one of their favorite plans to lure the allied troops on to attack them by various devices, of which an indicated intention of surrendering is the most composed of our Indian fellow whole forces under the command of their favorite plans to lure the allied troops on to attack them by various devices, of which an indicated intention of surrendering is the most common. If this deception is successful a skilffully concealed machine gun turns a murderous fire upon those who have advanced either to attack or to accept surrender.
