LOVE AND MARRIED LIFE

Woman Remembers, Man Forgets. I think the hardest thing I ever did in my life was to go to mother's room after John had left me in that unceremonious fashion. Strange isn't it that the knowledge that some one knows the hurt a loved one has given only makes that hurt cut the deeper. I am sure mother knew this, for she did not look into my face as she said: "Poor John, I feel so sorry for him dear, to have to go away from you at this time."

I could have fallen on my knees beside her and thanked her for the little play acting, but what I said was: "Yes, dear, you know John's and my bread and butter are quite dependent upon the success of his business and the one which called him home is the biggest he has ever had."

"Yes, so he told me," was mother's quiet comment.

And then we talked of other things.

"Yes, so he told me," was mother's; quiet comment.

And then we talked of other things. We changed the subject because our hearts were so full of the one thing that neither of us could speak about.

At last my mother questioned: "Do you think now that John has gone we should ask Dr. Hannaford to go with us to the cemetery?"

Almost as though this were his one Dr. Hannaford appeared in the doorway.

PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

It is go home On the way beek I met Charlie Goodwin and told him that he was to go in the carriage with you and your mother."

"I didn't know Charlie was intown." I managed to utter.

"He wasn't, but I telegraphed him at your mother's request at the time your father died, and he got in this morning. Apologized for not coming some, but said in some way the telegram was delayed and he did not get it in time to make the first train." I looked at Dr. Hannaford elosely to see if there was anything behind this simple statement, but he seemed to have a masculine view point of the necessity of John's leaving me.

I had not dreamed that I should see Charlie Goodwin, my distant cousin and almost foster brother at this time. He was so far away and engaged upon such an important matter that I felt sure he could not leave.

But now, as always Charlie came when I needed him most. To me he had always been a big brother to whom I could go in every sorrow and in every joy, and it was almost as saddening as it was surprising when on the eccession of his moving to a distant city to fill an important government position, he told me he leved me, that they are unique in affairs of this sort? Or are they like my husband—just interested for the time being in the thing in which they are interested—and able to relegate all other things to their forgettery at will?

I believe if I could have only one prayer answered it would be:OC. Fate, give me a good forgettery. A great big dark, solemn room in which I could place all my heartsickness, all my unhappinesses, all my disappointments all my disillusionments

Does any woman have the power to forget and does any man have the will to remember? I wonder.
