

12
He said he never said a better word, never answered back, that he shook hands with his most enemy, when they came he was just the same with them, never let them see what he felt. Is it not strange he said that he came to death till the end before they spoke the true word. The God is as sooner turned that the truth is here and there. They are said that one is not there to answer. I asked if this world were not the beginning of everything and Sir Welfred said yes, we go on and on, this plane is but the beginning.

He spoke of Laurin's house, and said I must go to enjoy the house that my dear wife gave to you, he said King will give you a promise to me, I said I would, he said it is that you will allow no one to crush that soul of yours, ^{of your goodness} in that house, that you will find it a help to you and your friends, don't let anything crush you keep strong, no matter what comes. I must be known to be known on the Laurin-King house, not Laurin's house, or Laurin's house but Laurin-King house, ^{Laurin's original} King's adoption, the two together. I said I could think of no honour greater than to have our names associated together he wanted the one or the other or the other, he then said I must thank you for that portrait. I said I was anxious to have one of Lady Laurin to put beside his, I had seen it, and thought it was going to be very good, he said he was very pleased.
He went on to speak of his wife and his loving kindness to her; to me, that it was deep love in her heart; all duty had done in her house had been out of love, that it was a ^{to a son} adoption.

His words on depression ^(from us) were as follows: When I was depressed and suffering from cerebral, many a time I went into the silence and prayed to God that he would help me. Many ^{an hour} in this silence I have talked with the dear Lord and asked if there was any way in which it would be possible to crush the inferior half of man that he would help and show me the way - real help I had to endure, real help I prayed God's help to help it to be crushed - when you are this strong boy I will conquer - real help, ^{no more just the same} and try to crush the soul, do not.
