As the troops designed for the invasion of Canada could not be encreased to too great a number: on the one hand, letters were fent to the governors, with orders to receive all the French deserters, to enlist them, and have them fupplied with every thing they should defire: on the other, it was industriously reported among the Ohio favages, that the English had no other view, but to protect them from the encroachments of the French; and the provincial governors were not wanting in their exhortations, that they would meet at Wills's-Creek, on the frontiers of Virginia. But it may be faid, that in general, the English have received little affiftance from these people. They were not better affisted by the Iroquois. It appears by general Braddock's letters, that of all the Five Nations, (a) the Anies were the only, who gave them any instances of attach-

To proceed: in order to prevail on the favages to take arms against the French, and ravage their colonies, was one of the subjects, deliberated in the grand council held at Alexandria, towards the middle of April. Colonel Shirley, then governor of New-England, arrived in that city the 12th, in company with the other governors, and colonel Johnson, who of all the English officers, was best acquainted with the genius of the savages, and

 \mathbf{F}

could pof-

advantage

which was

ng, while

nagazines

necessary

mniodore

cach o-

army had

ed by the

en, never

iz. The

hey were

ids, were

of Eng-

nd trans-

who was

general

rize was incerned

he court

but, the

in his

in case

ontrary

erefore,

he ge-

Com-

S.

Some

⁽a) See original Papers, No. 13.