CATHOLIC

MISSIONARIES

That one of the greatest forces for the civilization and enlightenment of China is the Catholic missionaries is the belief of Hector Fuller traveler and newspaper man, who knows China as few Americans know it Mr. Fuller spent many years investi quently was brought into close con-tact with the Catholic missionaries as well as with their converts. He is personally acquainted with many of these men who have left their homes in various countries of the world to carry the faith to this

"The missionaries in Manchuria began well from the very beginning," says Mr. Fuller. "It was, of course, the valiant Jesuits who led in the field. The Manchus were hardly seated on the Dragon Throne before they sent some Jesuit Fathers to make reliable maps of their ancestral tomes in the surrounding country. Again, in 1689, when Chinese ambassadors left Peking to conclude the famous treaty of Nerchinsk which settled the question of the old Manchurin frontier with the Russians for one hundred and thirty years, they were accompanied by two Jesuits, Father Gerbillon and Father Pereyra, in the capacity of interpre-Their influence is shown by the fact that of the three versions of the treaty concluded, one was in Latin, the official language of these clerical advisers.

"Despite the fact that these men and their confreres were recognized for their scholarship rather than because of their Christianity, the Fathers never forgot for a moment that their real mission in China was to spread the Christian faith, and their work was rewarded by great success. In their quest for the salvation of souls, the missionaries they were not known to exist. They thought of their own comfort or their own safety. Their one aim was the propagation of the faith which was dearer to them than anything else in the world, and no risk was too great to prevent them from carrying this plan into effect.

"These early missionaries have been followed by worthy successors, and the work is being continued in plendid style. The Jesuits are not alone in the field now, for most of the religious orders are well repre-sented. The Catholic converts are the very highest type of Chinese and there are many native priests Native women have also become nuns, and are conducting schools. hospitals, orphanages and other in stitutions of education and charity with the same zeal as are their Occi dental sisters.—St. Paul Bulletin.

IRISH RELIGIOUS CENSUS

According to a parliamentary white paper the religious census of Ireland is as follows: Catholics, 8,242,670; Episcopalians, 576,611; Presbyterians, 440,525: Methodists, 62,382; all others, 68,081. This gives 1,147,541 non-Catholics, against the 8,242,690 Catholics. But while Catholics represent slightly less than

SONG OF THE MYSTIC

I walked down the Valley of Silence Down the dim, voiceless valley, and I hear not the fall of a footste Around me, save God's and my own And the hush of my heart is as holy

Long ago I was weary oi voices Whose music my heart could not Long ago I was weary of noises That fretted my soul with their din Long ago I was weary of places Where I met but the human—and

I walked in the world with the worldly; I craved what the world never gave And I said: "In the world each ideal That shines like a star on life's wave

BISHOP BECOMES A MONK

BRAZIL PRELATE RESIGNS AND DONS HABIT OF HERMITS OF ST. ROMUALDI

It is not often we see a bishop leaving his diocese to become a monk as is the case of the Right Rev. Monsignor Benizio de Souza-Costa, Bis-hop of Manaos, Brazil, who on Easter Sunday took off his episcopal robes and donned the white habit of the hermits of St. Romualdi among the

This prelate took possession of the diocese of Manaos in 1907, but six months ago he came to Rome and begged of Pius X. to permit him to resign and become a Religious, as he felt the call of God to that kind of life. His Holiness, not wishing to prevent the Bishop from following what the latter believed to be his real vocation, imposed upon him to wait for a half year before coming to a final decision. This period having passed and left Bishop Benizio de Souza-Costa as firmly determined as ever upon leaving the world, the Sacred Consistorial Congregation in obe-dience to orders from the Holy Father made all formal arrangements according to the prelate's will.

The Bishop has entered the novitiate of the Camaldolese hermits who live near Frascati and is known in religion as Father Arsene.

Another example of the kind would be His Eminence Cardinal Neto, Patriarch of Lisbon, who resigned the Patriarchate some years ago, and entered a monastery. But as the Cardinal had been a Friar Minor before he was chosen for the episcopacy he merely returned to the circumstances of life from which he had been called. When the Right Rev. John Vaughan, Titular of Sebastopolis and Auxiliary Bishop of Salford, England (brother of the better-known Father Bernard Vaughan), lived in Rome, he tried his vocation about ten years ago with the Carthusians. He resigned his title as Domestic Prelate and entered this strict order after bidding fare-well to Pius X. However, six nonths sufficed to convince him him of his unsuitability for the religious life.—Michigan Catholic.

ENTIRE FAMILY MADE CATHO LIC BY NUNS' LIVES

An entire North Denver family was converted recently as a result of good example on the part of Catho-lics, and was confirmed last Sunday.

Miss Edna Laney, living at 1404 Alcott, as a Protestant enrolled in St. Mary's Academy, conducted by the Sisters of Loretto. The beautiful lives of the Sisters and the standard of conduct of the student body so appealed to her that she saw the truth in the Catholic Church. The students there, she said, represented a higher class of girlhood than she had ever met before. Mrs. William Laney, the mother of the student, became interested in the Catholic Church, because of her daughter's attachment for it, and investigated the faith, about which she had hith. erto not known auy more than does the average Protestant. The result was that within two or three months she, too, was baptised The consist-ency and loyalty of his wife and daughter to their new religion inte ested the father, and he, too, decided to investigate the faith. He enrolled as a student of Catholic doctrine and also came into the true Church.

EVEN THE FIRST ARTICLE

Protestantism is doubtful even about the first article of the Creed, (I believe in God.") a fact emphasized by Canon Cashdall, a prominent clergyman of the Church of England, who says, as quoted by the Catholic Times:

"Anybody who knows much of what is going on in the minds of thoughtful men and women at the present day knows very well that for most of them this is the real difficulty. This is what they most want to believe, and yet they find difficulties in the way of doing so. It is pit-iful to see so large a part of the eniful to see so large a part of the energies of clergymen devoted to a furious propaganda of what must, even if they are true, be regarded as mere outworks to the Christian Creed, when all their energies are wanted to keep alive in the modern world that first and most important Article of all."

Commenting on this the Times observes that "for such condition of things in the National Church distinguished preachers and teachers must be largely responsible."
But is it not rather "Private Judgment" that is to blame? How could the condition be otherwise under the operation of that principle?-N. Y. reeman's Journal.

AMERICAN PILGRIMAGE TO THE EUCHARISTIC CONGRESS AT LOURDES

The three pilgrimages managed by Mr. John J. McGrane, under the spiritual direction of Bishops Matz and Conroy and Mgr. Freri, which had sailed from New York at different dates, met in Paris on July 21, en route for Lourdes. The party, over one hundred strong, counted among its members Bishop Hennessy of Wichita, Mgr. Lings of New York, and many of the clergy from all parts of the United States.

We arrived in Lourdes on schedule time and were soon comfortably quartered. We found here Cardinal Falety, Bishop-elect Hayes, Mgr. Edwards, Dr. Carroll, Dr. McMahon, Father Hughes of New York, Bishop Hartley of Columbus, Mgr. Whelan of Newark, etc. etc.

The general sessions of the Congress were held in the beautiful open space which fronts the Basilica. The sight of the Pinnes of the Church, in full ecclesiastical regalia, sitting on a platform especially built for the purpose, backed by the beautiful colonade, while high over all heads towered the magnificent basilica and higher still, the great tree-clad foot hills of the Pyrenees, while among all, and over all floated the yellow and white of the grand old church of St. Peter and the blue and white of of Our Lady, made a picture once seen never forgotten.

Always the central figure in this magnificent pic-

Always the central figure in this magnificent picture was the princely form of Cardinal Granto di Belmonte, the Papal Legate, while on his right sat Cardinal Farley of New York, and, at his left; Cardinal Logue of Ireland.

Cardinal Farley's address to the Congress was enthusiastically received, and one morning the American pilgrims had the privilege of attending the Cardinal's Mass and receiving Communion from his hards.

dinal's Mass and receiving Communion from hadds.

Religion and devotion seem to permeate the air hadds.

Religion and devotion seem to permeate the air masser at zoo altars are being celebrated from midnight till noon each day. Each day at the close of the Congress there is a grand procession of the clergy. The golden canopy is carried by priests, the mon strance by a cardinal, followed by the stately form of the Cardinal Legate, land then by cardinals, arch bishops, bishops, monsignori, clergy to the number of the sick takes place.

Reach sequing, there is a procession. Clergy an 5,000. During this procession, the solemn blessing of the sick takes place.

Each evening, there is a procession. Clergy and laity, men and women, each carrying a lighted candle join this procession. The thousands of marchers with their twinkling lights mass in regular order before the church of the Rosary where they silently kneel to receive the blessing of the Pope's representative as he stands high on the steps above, while far away, on a high peak of the Pyrenees gleams an illuminated cross.

On Sunday a Pontifical Mass was sung by the Cardinal Legate. An altar had been built high on the steps of the Basilica. The beautiful ceremony, the quiet kneeling thousands, people of many tongues but one religion, made one feel that here at Notre Dame de Lourdes had met and been achieved "The Congress of the World" and "the brother-hood of man."

The closing procession of the Congress took place Sunday afternoon, when the Eucharist was carried triumphantly through the beautifully decorated streets of Lourdes, attended by Princes of the church, followed by marching multitudes of priests and laymen, with flags flying. Conspicuous among these flags was our starry banner, brought from New York by Mr. McGrane, and after the procession presented to the Basilica, where it will hang as a monument of the devotion of American Catholics to the Eucharistic God.

Other Congresses there may have been, more istic God.

Other Congresses there may have been, more largely attended, others there may be, but none can ever be more solemnly devotional, for love of God, home, and country was strengthened in the heart of every man and every woman who attended the wonderful Congress at Notre Dame de Lourdes, MARY E.
