NO STREET GATHERINGS

Everyone in Haste to Reach Shelter When on the Streets-The Thermometer Goes Down to Ten Degrees Below Zero.

"My, but h's cold," has been the exclamation made on every hand Thursday and Wednesday, and there was no expression of dissent from any except those confined in the Hotel Mitchell and who were sitting in front of the hospitally heated stove that the genial Billy knows so well how to provide.

Bank of British North America, Bank of Montreal, Merchants' Bank of Halifax, Bank of Toronto, British America and who were sitting in front of the Billy knows so well how to provide. There were no groups of people gathered at the street corners, and when two friends met on the street they did not stop to shake hands, but if they wanted to talk one of them turned sharp round and walked briskly by the side of the other, but the conversation between the two was extremely limited until some hospitable door could be opened and the friendly stove or heater could be reached, for they could not afford to have their breath frozen.

Once inside there was a chance to talk, and it flowed very freely, and the two or three were loth to leave the hospitable shelter and go out into the cold.

talk, and it flowed very freely, and the two or three were loth to leave the hospitable shelter and go out into the cold, wild world alone. Once outside the door there were no farewells uttered, but each took his own way and rushed quickly for another shelter. If business necessitated a trip on the hill, say to the B. A. No one, however, went out unless compelled to.

Overcoats, fur caps, tuques, gloves and mits were in demand, and no one thought of venturing out without having his or her feet well clad. There were very few of the fair sex abroad. The fireside was more conffortable. The thermometers varied considerably, some registering three or four degrees higher or lower than others, so that it is diffior lower than others, so that it is discovered to say what degree of cold was reached. At Goodeve's drug store on Columbia avenue at 7:30 yesterday morning the thermometer registered six degrees below zero, and during the day it never rose to zero, but remained about two below. The thermometer in front of Simpson's store during the day was at zero, and varied very little till after Complaints were made that yesterday was the coldest day of the season, but this was not so, for during the last cold spell, which was solcontinuous, the water tank on the Red Mountain railway froze very badly, while during this snap it has remained open. The sudden change from mild thawing weather to 34 or 35 degrees of frost made itself felt more severely, and caused everyone to think the coldest day of the season was being experienced. Milder weather is promised by the sharps, and there will be few in Rossland who will not wel-

On the 13th of December, 1898, our city clerk was instructed by a motion of the council to write you on the same subject. At preliminary arrangements that time we sent you a copy of the re-port brought in by a special committee appointed to deal with this matter; also a rough sketch plan showing the pro-posed course of the sewer. In that re-port many and strong reasons were set orth why our position should be granted. Not receiving from you any reply to that letter, we wrote our member, James Martin, telling him what we had done and urging him to get an early reply from you. After an interview with your chairman, he wrote back informing us that you had stated that you had you that you had stated that our position was ledge cannot be far off. What we ask is that permission be given us subject to ply to our request, for the reason that in less than two months the spring will be upon us, and a city of over 8,000 in-nabitants will be left without adequate means of disposing of her sewage.

We would point out Rossland's situa-

We would urge that if necessary a special meeting of your body be held so that we may have a reply, whether for or against our request, without delay.
