A KITCHEN APRON.

One That is Serviceable and Easily Made at Home.

Without doubt every housewife has a kitchen apron of some description, but the style shown in the sketch below is becoming very popular. It may be bought ready made or very easily constructed at home. If new material is used, apron gingham, two widths are necessary, putting the selvages together in the side seams and leaving a space of six inches at the top not sewed for the armholes. If the person is rather plump for whom the apron is made, use three widths of gingham in the same way. By following the sketch closely there will be no difficulty in carrying out the design. It is only straight breadths of material gathered into a band; these shoulder straps, merely straight bands, connect the back with the front. The apron should be long to cover the gown well, as this apron is easily put off and on, making it indispensable to the young housekeeper who does her own cooking. Do not make a mistake and omit the ruffle around the bottom, for it protects the gown underneath by its fullness sticking out from the skirt.

A Mother's kitchen apron is very desirable during the preserving season. It may be made of a gingham dress skirt that has a passe waist by making the length of the skirt sufficient by adding a wide ruffle. The apron buttons down the back—Exchange.

To Gain Flesh.

To gain flesh, eat a hearty breakfast and dinner and a light luncheon.

Bread, butter and stewed fruit and milk are necessary articles of diet. Let the bread be brown or gluten loaf, and have the milk hot, not scalded; take some of the latter during the day, but eat no solids between meals. Olive oil on fresh green salad and cream with baked bananas are fattening foods.

Before retiring take a warm bath to induce sleep, which aids in increasing flesh. Devote ten hours to sleep, and if possible rest for ten minutes every afternoon.

Spend one whole day in bed each month, sleeping as much of the day as possible. The only true way to rest is to lie down in a darkened room with closed eyes and think of nothing. Even five minutes of such rest is valuable; the muscles of the face relax, and one does not get a hard, set look, which adds many years to the appearance.

Take time to eat your meals. If you have not time to get a meal leisurely, go without it, as it will not injure you a quarter as much as it will to eat in a hurry.

Irvaluable For Mending.

A very handy thing to have about the house is a strip of the rubber tissue such as is used in hospitals. Not only is this an excellent cure for scald or burn, a rheumatic muscle, a sore chest or tired, aching joints and feet, but it is a valuable adjunct to the mending basket.

If there is a tear in a three layer skirt, draw the edges together, lay on a little snare of the tissue, cover this with a patch and press with a moderately hot iron until the tissue, which is of pure gum, is dissolved. If care is taken of this tissue, it will last indefinitely. It must not be kept in a hot room or shut up away from the air in a tight box or drawer. Put it between two sheets of paper and lay where the air can circulate around it. It is not expensive. Fifty cents will buy a strip over a yard long and a quarter wide, an outlay that will pay for itself many times over. It can be bought at almost any drugstore.

How to Spell Faults.

Laugh at their faults; encourage them; give them their own way; tell them pretty untruths; give them what they cry for; shout at the top of your voice to them; never encourage their efforts to do better; fly into a passion with them several times a day; punish them if they break some trifle by accident; don't enter into their games; when they ask for information, tell them to be quiet; let them think the streets are the best place to play; never take any notice of their childish sorrows; don't have any toys or playthings tossed around the house; don't bother yourself about those house they go to; don't trouble inviting their companions to your house; always take part against their teachers and try to forget as much as possible that you were once young yourself.

Whooping Cough.

For whooping cough, 5 cents' worth of sirup of rhubarb and 5 cents' worth of castor oil, mixed, and given twice a day—half a small teaspoonful at a time—will often effect a cure. Another good remedy is powdered alum. Give four grains of this in a teaspoonful of sugar and water three times a day one hour before food. This dose may be given to a child one year old and upward, increasing the dose till eight grains are given. For a child of ten begin with eight grains and increase to sixteen. Let the child be in the open air as much as possible.

SEVEN YEARS IN BED

This Wonderful Case Borders on the Miraculous

Nothing Like it Has Ever Been Heard of—In Newfoundland, Where the Story Comes From it Has Created a Profound Sensation.

Cottrell's Cove, New Bay, Newfoundland, Oct. 6.—(Special).—This part of the island has been thoroughly aroused by the miraculous cure of a man named Joseph Boon.

For eight years this man had been ailing and for seven years of this time he was unable to work. He had Back Ache and Kidney Complaint, in fact he was all pains and aches. He had been treated from time to time by several doctors and although he always carefully attended to their several prescriptions he got no relief, but was slowly growing worse.

Finally he went to the Hospital, where he remained for seven months, only to be sent home as an incurable case.

He has tried every remedy he could hear of, electric belts, liniments, oils and other medicines but all of no avail. No one thought he could ever be well again.

However, one day he picked up a newspaper containing an account of how Mr. Richard Quirk, of Fortune Harbor, had been cured of Lumbago by Dodd's Kidney Pills. After reading this Mr. Boon made up his mind to try this remedy and at once began a treatment.

He used altogether twenty-one boxes before he was able to go to work again, but now he is able to attend to his daily duties as strong and vigorous as any man along the coast.

Mr. Boon is a fisherman and is at present engaged at lobster fishing with no thought whatever of his old time Back Ache and other pains.

Many people here regard this cure as little short of miraculous.

Bananas, English Style.

At English table spoons are served with bananas. If the bananas are served as a single fruit course, however, sherry is usually sent around with it. A few drops are poured upon the plate, and the banana, stripped little by little of its skin, is dipped into this and thus eaten.

A Natural Development.

"Not a bit of it. I've branched out in matrimony."

"Indeed! Olive branches, of course?"

DEAFNESS CANNOT BE CURED

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube gets inflamed you have a running sound of imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out of this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of deafness (caused by catarrh) that can not be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

THE G.O.M. OF CRICKET.

Dr. W. G. Grace Continues His Wonderful Work at the Wicket at 54—He Plays Every Week Day.

Dr. W. G. Grace, the greatest cricket player that England, or, for that matter, the world, has ever produced, has just celebrated his fifty-fourth birthday. Two days before the happening of the anniversary he completed his two hundredth century at the game in matches with first-class clubs in a contest between the London County Cricket Club and the Marylebone Cricket Club, Dr. Grace is the captain and the greatest drawing card of the London County Club.

Compiling his two hundredth century means that he has made more than 100 runs in match games and more than 1000 in all.

He is an amateur, and only plays cricket for the fun and sport he finds in it, and yet despite his age he plays nearly every week-day during the season. Besides being a great batsman, he is a first-class bowler, and in the game mentioned he had the satisfaction of putting out the recently knighted novelist, Dr. Conan Doyle. They do not raise cricket players to the knighthood, but the honor would have been conferred on Dr. Grace many years ago.

Relative to Grace's two hundredth century in connection with his birthday, The London Morning Leader has this to say:

"Dr. W. G. Grace is 54 years old to-day, and we wish him many happy returns. Not long ago a well known writer gravely suggested the probability of the champion qualifying by residence to play for Kent County Club. The wish was no doubt father to the thought—especially among those who had the good fortune to see him make 257 runs at Gravesend in the year 1895, but the hero of two hundred centuries appears to have taken a final farewell of the county championship, and to-day he appeals to us as a batsman of the highest order whose industry in the sporting world has been as potent as that of the retiring Premier in the domain of politics."

"Dr. Grace, who is the perfect embodiment of John Bull, has been known to the public over forty years as a cricketer, and a gentleman, and in grateful recollection of his matchless services to the game, we are proud to accept him as such. It was in the year 1859 that W. G. severed his connection with Gloucester cricket, and came up to found that London County Club at the Crystal Palace. There can be little doubt that the English champion has done much to foster the game in the metropolis, especially among second-class cricketers, who at once flocked to his standard, but for the sake of the old memories at Downend and the many trophies he had won in the western county, it seemed rather regrettable that he should have left the home of the Graces and identified himself with a new body. For more sentimental reasons we would have preferred the name of Grace to have been a synonym for Gloucester cricket to the end of the chapter, but cricket is not run on sentimental lines, and the country gentleman of the nineteenth century is the bias of the new century."

"The absurdity of comparing modern batsmen with the champion is more apparent when one reflects that he was born in 1848, and that he will be 54 years old next Friday. Hanitschki dazzled us yesterday with a magnificent innings at Hastings, but the Indian is still a young man, and it is doubtful if he will ever be found scoring over 300 runs, as Grace did in a single innings at the age of 48. The quality in Grace that compels the admiration of the whole sporting world is the marvelous consistency which he has shown for nearly half a century against all sorts of bowlers and upon every condition of wicket."

"In the days of his boyhood, when the famous brothers played in the quaint old garden at Downend, W. G. was always a prominent figure, and he had reached the discreet age of 9 when he was called on to assist West Gloucestershire. At 15 he scored 170 and 56 not out against the Gentlemen of Sussex at Brighton; at 18 he made 224 not out for England against Surrey at the Oval; and if Grace had never reached the majorities he would have glorified the traditions of the game. For five years in succession he scored a thousand runs and took a hundred wickets in first-class cricket; he has topped the double century thirteen times; he has taken all ten wickets for the M. C. C., and scored for the same club in the year 1876 the enormous total of 344."

"Coming down to more recent times, he started the cricket world by taking five wickets for 29 runs against the Australians at Lord's for the M.C.C. in May last. Last year he topped the hundred on two occasions—against Cambridge University and the M.C.C.—and both scores were made at the Palace, where the doctor has now been playing for three years on behalf of the London County team."

"The baggage-smasher's wisdom. The other day an express wagon filled with trunks rattled up Broadway, and just opposite the postoffice a big Saratoga slid off and came crashing down on the car tracks. Several people ran out from the sidewalk to rescue it, but the trunk proved to be empty, and there was little damage done. "Now, if that had been full," said one old gentleman to the expressman, "you'd have had a fine old time with it." "Hub," replied the baggage charioter scornfully, "full trunks don't fall off by themselves. You got to fling them off!"

HISTORIC HITCHING POST.

One of the Familiar Landmarks of the National Capital.

One of the oldest signs in Washington is the cast iron figure of a Chinaman about three and a half feet in height that stands in front of a lively stable on Sixth street northwest between Pennsylvania and Louisiana avenues. It has been there since 1862 and is one of the familiar landmarks of the city.

During the civil war Generals Grant, McClellan, Hooker and others who patronized this stable a great deal tied their steeds to this hitching post, and since then other distinguished personages have had occasion to use this post during every presidential inauguration that has occurred since Lincoln's second term.

As a matter of fact, this much of Sixth street northwest, between Pennsylvania and Louisiana avenues, is a historic locality in more than one sense. It was on the corner of this street and Louisiana avenue that General Robert E. Lee bade farewell to his old commander, General Winfield Scott, when the former withdrew from the Union army to join that of the Confederacy. During the first two years of the war General McClellan and others came here regularly to purchase and inspect horses, it being at that time a sort of horse market.

The Age of the Water Clock. As far back as 2636 B. C. a Chinaman named Hwang Ti discovered the principle of the water clock, or "clepsydra."

It was a very crude instrument, chiefly for astronomical purposes, and was committed to the care of an officer known as the "clepsydra adjuster." It consisted of two copper vessels, one above and one below, the former having a hole in the bottom, through which the water percolated into the latter, where there was a float, the gradual rise of which indicated periods of time. Portable contrivances of this description were sometimes carried on horseback.

Instruments constructed on the same principle were in use among the Chaldeans and Egyptians at an early period. The invention in western Asia was independent of that in the east, both being the result of similar wants. Clepsydras were subsequently formed of a series of vessels communicating by tubes passing through figures of dragons and other images, the whole being rendered yet more ornamental by boats held between the hands of geni.

The Woodcock. The food of the woodcock consists of worms, leeches and grubs, which the bird seeks by probing with its bill the earth of such swamps as contain them. There are miles and miles of wet swamp lands among our hills where the soil, composed of peat and decayed leaf mold, is too cold and sour to hold worms. Into such swamps the woodcock never goes. The best woodcock ground is along the banks of woodland brooks where it is in and out through alder swamps, where the rich black mold is soft and full of worms and where the skunk cabbage and helioleone grow thick and broad leaved. Such places are the woodcock's dining rooms, and in them he leaves his sign manual, the oblong, almost triangular holes which dot each and every square foot of earth where a worm might possibly lurk.

The Baggage-Smasher's Wisdom. The other day an express wagon filled with trunks rattled up Broadway, and just opposite the postoffice a big Saratoga slid off and came crashing down on the car tracks. Several people ran out from the sidewalk to rescue it, but the trunk proved to be empty, and there was little damage done. "Now, if that had been full," said one old gentleman to the expressman, "you'd have had a fine old time with it." "Hub," replied the baggage charioter scornfully, "full trunks don't fall off by themselves. You got to fling them off!"
