Humor and Philosophy

By DUNCAN M. SMITH

THE COOLER SEX.

Bound by the chain of custom
And nurtured in her school,
Man looks about him and observes
His sister free and cool;
For in a shirt waist costume
She glides about the place,
While he must sweeter in a vest
Or else be in disgrace.

She wears the gauzy garment
The livelong summer through,
With holes for ventilation
Where men may peekaboo.
Of course I don't imagine
That she needs such things for fear;
The men are all too bashful,
Or too polite, I hear.

Built on the lines of beauty
And sense and higher art,
The shirt waist can't be worn
An added grace impart;
And man looks on impatient
And wishes all the while
He had the nerve to wear it,
Regardless of the style.

Man boasts that he has conquered
The beasts of lesser wit,
And made the elements sit up
And notice him a bit.
But when it comes to dressing
For comfort and for ease,
He has to wear the honor
To woman, if you please.

Thoroughly Feminine.

"I suppose your wife likes to have the last word, like all women?"
"Does she? Say, that woman would talk back to a phonograph."

To Capitalize the Habit.

"What is he going to call his new paper?"
"He thinks some of naming it the 'Umbrella.'"
"Weather news organ?"
"Not specially; but he thinks if he names it the Umbrella everybody would take it."

Had a Precedent.

"Our minister frequently preaches against diamonds and such adornments."
"What does he find in them to talk about?"
"Sermons in stones, I guess."

A Card Shark.

"Really, I do not know which card to play."
"When in doubt, you know, play trumps."
"Yes, that's so. Which is trumps, aces or ten spots?"

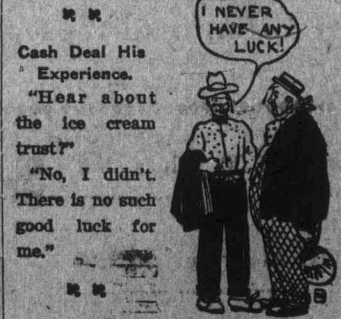

Save Yourself.

When a motor car is moting
Down the busy boulevard,
That's the time to be watching
How the grass grows in the yard;
Clear the track and keep a-running,
Save yourself, and then look out;
Oh, the lady looks too cunning
In her little runabout.

When a chauffeur starts to chauffeur
Down a quiet country road,
It's no time for lazy loafing
For an elephant or toad;
It is time to seek for shelter,
To vanquish, light out, sidddoo,
When the chauffeur, helter skelter,
Lets his speed belt out a few.

Interested.

"He has a genius for trouble."
"Indeed, how strange?"
"Oh, I don't know; he's a lawyer."

PERT PARAGRAPHS.

There are a lot of people wandering sadly about the landscape wondering what has become of the limelight that used to shine so generously upon them.

CANADA'S GREATEST NEED.

People of the Dominion Must Stand For Better Education.

Canada as a Confederation is just forty years old and one is reminded of the message of Moses to Israel. "Thou shalt remember all the way by which the Lord thy God led thee these forty years." To the nation, as to the individual, there comes always the danger "lest we forget."

We can appreciate now more fully than at the first the constructive statemanship that welded together our provinces, opening a new prospect of national unity and growth. We can recall those early years of Confederation when reciprocity had been cancelled and the southern markets had been closed, when the American tariff bore severely upon us, when we had not found our way to the markets across the seas and when problems of transportation and of tariff seemed almost more than we could solve. We can recall the opening of our great West that had hitherto lain, silent and empty, the rebellion that threatened our peaceful possession of it, but that served only to unite our provinces more firmly than acts of Parliament could bind them, the spanning of prairie and mountain by railway, attended by the vanguard of immigration "the first low wash of waves where soon would roll a human sea." Little wonder that it took so long for others to know much about us when it took so long for us to know ourselves. But we have in some degree taken our bearings, and have begun to realize our possibilities. We have tapped our resources at a sufficient number of points to assure us of great material wealth; we have checked the outflow of our own people by providing employment for them at home; we are receiving accessions to our population at a rate that now calls for increased care about their admission; we have developed so many enterprises that there is nothing more to demand as labor; from sea to sea there is a pulse of life and hopefulness that makes it seem as if to-day every Canadian must be an optimist.

Yet there are needs that must be remembered and remedied. One only I would here insist upon, and that is comprehensive one, one of becoming a better educated people. We are a democracy, and education is the very basis of democratic progress, but our advance in popular education is far behind our commercial and industrial development, the average condition of our rural schools to-day compared with that of thirty years ago. The interests of education, like those of religion, require to be urged upon public attention. The distribution of mental and spiritual food is not regulated by the laws of supply and demand that rule in the case of wheat. We require to be reminded of our higher needs lest we forget that man does not live by bread alone. And so we can better afford to have weak administration anywhere else than in our educational system. Eager immigrants are crowding across, as they press in by our open door, and it is by the public school that these incoming families are to be fashioned into patriotic Canadians. This is the mint in which the metal coming from many countries is to be stamped with the maple leaf and with the superscription of the King.

If we Canadians are to be worthy of our heritage, by whatever lines we may as fellow-citizens be divided, we must be united in promoting the interests of education, not merely in one class of schools but in all, from kindergarten to university for convenience, for other purpose than that in this way we may produce a robust and lofty patriotism—Principal Gordon in Courier.

Celebrating Hudson River.

The plans for the so-called Hudson-Fulton celebration two years hence have been submitted, and it is evident that the Hudson river, as it discoverer nor the first explorer of steamships, is to be the centre of the celebration. Festivities which are imposing and adequate for the purposes are to extend over eight days, from Sept. 15 to Sept. 23, 1909. This period includes the date of Hudson's halt on the up trip and his return downstream, Sept. 19 and 23 respectively.

Fulton's celebrated trip up the Hudson in the pioneer steamboat Clermont took place Aug. 11, 1807, and this event is brought into the celebration of 1909 for convenience. In the great water parade, which will close the ceremonies, models of Hudson's ship, the Half Moon, and of the Clermont will be escorted up the river. Thus the names and the deeds of these two will be linked with the river, and the history of the Hudson will have become historic had neither Hudson nor Fulton ever sailed upon its waters. However, their names are inseparably associated with the river, and it is fitting that they be linked in the manner proposed in the program of the celebration.

Good Fishing in the Lakes.

The present season promises one of the largest catches of fish in the great lakes in many years. The usual output of the lakes for several years past has been close to 150 million pounds annually of which Lake Erie produced over half. For the past decade there has been a gradual falling off in the quantity of fish caught in the great lakes. This year, however, the nets of the fishing companies along the coast of lakes have almost invariably been overrunning when lifted. The success of the fishermen who fish every day during the season contradicts the supposition that the lake supply of fish is giving out. The increase in the catch this year is doubtless due to the protection to fish given by the various recently enacted laws.

Skeletons Unearthed.

In the Village of Bloomfield, Ontario, while laborers were excavating the cellar of a house, they came across the skeletons of several bodies, which it is supposed had many years ago been interred in an Indian burying ground, some four or five skulls were found, and pronounced those of Indians.

INOPPORTUNE DEATHS.

Men Who, Had They Lived, Might Have Changed History.

Julius Caesar was assassinated when he had almost completed the task of consolidating the administration and dominion of the Roman empire, and his death opened the way to that despotism and corruption which ultimately undid his work. Henry of Navarre was killed when he had almost healed the differences between Catholic and Protestant which subsequently rent not only France, but Europe, and William the Silent also fell when he was on the point of uniting the Netherlands provinces into a compact barrier against the encroachments of Spain.

In English history Lord Clive died at the moment when he was the one man who could have saved the American colonies and kept the Anglo-Saxon race united. But there is the case of Mirabeau. He was literally the one man in France who could have averted the horrors of the revolution, saved and reformed the monarchy and so spared Europe the murderous career of Napoleon and all the devastation it brought. If he had lived ten or even five years longer, the history not only of France, but of Europe and the world, would have been different. It is, in fact, sufficient to say that he would have made both Robespierre and Napoleon impossible.

A Great Leveler.

Have you ever thought what a great leveler the telephone is? You would never think of meeting some dignitary of church or state or some great society lady on the street and addressing either with a familiar "Hello!" It would be unpardonable rudeness, and yet that is what you do daily when you use the telephone, and nothing is thought of it. The judge on the bench, the governor in his office, the busy coupon clipper at his desk, the overworked clerk, the lady in her boudoir, the artisan at his lathe, are all slaves to that democratic "Hello!" It matters not who may be on the other end of the wire.—Stanberry Owl.

The Old Commercial Instinct.

"What do you think of this table, William?" asked Mrs. Newryrich, pointing proudly to the antique piece she had purchased.
"What did you pay for it?" grunted her Bill of "without any money" days.
"One hundred dollars, dear."
"I think you ought to have been able to buy a new one for that," returned her unantiquarian informed spouse, casting a reflective and scrutinizing glance over the ancient piece of furniture.

Every day a man submits to some injustice he vowed yesterday he would never stand.

How shall I be able to rule over others, that have not the full power and command of myself?

Heart Strength

Heart Strength, or Heart Weakness, means Nerve Strength, or Nerve Weakness—nothing more. For, actually, the heart is a muscle, and it is, in its own way, a very delicate muscle. It is the seat of the nervous system, and it is the seat of the emotions. It is the seat of the life, and it is the seat of the death. It is the seat of the love, and it is the seat of the hate. It is the seat of the joy, and it is the seat of the sorrow. It is the seat of the hope, and it is the seat of the despair. It is the seat of the faith, and it is the seat of the unbelief. It is the seat of the courage, and it is the seat of the cowardice. It is the seat of the strength, and it is the seat of the weakness. It is the seat of the power, and it is the seat of the impotence. It is the seat of the glory, and it is the seat of the shame. It is the seat of the honor, and it is the seat of the dishonor. It is the seat of the life, and it is the seat of the death. It is the seat of the love, and it is the seat of the hate. It is the seat of the joy, and it is the seat of the sorrow. It is the seat of the hope, and it is the seat of the despair. It is the seat of the faith, and it is the seat of the unbelief. It is the seat of the courage, and it is the seat of the cowardice. It is the seat of the strength, and it is the seat of the weakness. It is the seat of the power, and it is the seat of the impotence. It is the seat of the glory, and it is the seat of the shame. It is the seat of the honor, and it is the seat of the dishonor. It is the seat of the life, and it is the seat of the death. It is the seat of the love, and it is the seat of the hate. It is the seat of the joy, and it is the seat of the sorrow. It is the seat of the hope, and it is the seat of the despair. It is the seat of the faith, and it is the seat of the unbelief.
