FTER THE CONVENTION.

AFTER THE CONVENTION. As anticipated, the Grit conven-tion spent Tuesday and Wednes-day of last week at Ottawa. Long speeches were made, resolutions having no definite meaning were passed and the delegates returned to their respective homes leaving the world to worder why they were called together. The programme speech of the Leader and the platform resolu-tions are the two deliverances-which may be considered of most anthority regarding the attitude of the convention so far as public issues are concerned. The greater part of both speech and resolutions is given up to the demunciation of the conduct of political opponents. Most people will conclude that it was quite unnecessary to call antional convention for that pur-mational convention for that pur-massed and convention for that pur-the world to political opponents. Most people will conclude that it was quite unnecessary to call antional convention for that pur-to have them oblicerated. Old ose, as they are willing to assu hat the assembled delegates c gates con- fogyism should be cried down and sidered the members of the present rederal Government fit for the penitentiary and all that; but at the same time it would be inter-esting to know how the con-tion of the present is desirous. Broad minded politi-cians with statesmanlike views vention would define its own position. Here, however, the disappoint-ment commences. Mr. Laurier in hand. The conduct of the late Sir his speech makes many excellent John McDonald, the great states-general observations; but in the whole discourse he does not intim-abundant evidence of this noble ate how he would vote on any spirit. One of his guiding princi-question except a motion of want ples was to gather around him the He speaks of re- young men of the country, whom of confidence. He speaks of re-young men of the possessed of trenchment in general; but does he preceived to be possessed of talent and ability.
