SATURDAY EVE'G, SEPTEMBER 14.

NORAH CUSHALEEN

HAUNTED CASTLE.

'Bedad, but it's a long way they've taken him to, observed Terry, as he cast his eyes forward to the distant mountains.'

Andrew was not so impatient but he saw that this would be the wisest plan. They therefore returned to the village, and after partaking of supper, retired to bed, that they might be fresh for the morning start.

Andrew was installed in his master's own room where everything belonging to Hargreave had been untouched. His portfolio lay open on the table just as he had left it; and the coat he threw off on quitting the house hung on the back of the chair where he had placed it.

But as darkness, silence, and motionlessness are calculated to increase and intensify thought in an anxious mind, so Andrew had not been long in bed when he found he could not sleep.

'This comes o' fa'in' in love in a heathen kintroy,' he said to himself, after lying for several hours with a harassed mind. 'At home, noo, when twa lads wad wane the same lass, she jist takes the one she likes best, and the ither has to pit up wi' the best way he can.'

It was a low, scraping noise which fell on Andrew's ear, and lifting up his face from the coverlet, he looked towards the window and saw a man outside trying to open it. The window faced the east, and the first streaks of dawn sent a faint light into the apartment.

It was a lattice window, which opened from the centre, and was secured in the inside by an iron hasp. This hasp the man was endeavoring to lift by inserting the blade of a knife between the compartments, and this was the low scraping sound that drew Andrew's attention.

The latter's first impulse was to spring upon the floor, and prevent the entrance of the robber, but the thought flashed on his mind that the fellow, and his presence there, might have something to do with his master's disappearance.

He therefore resolved to lie quite still, and discover his object before he gave the alarm, or took any kind of action.

In less than a minute the hasp was lifted and laid quietly down on the other side. This released one half of the window, and the man had only to insert his arm to unfasten the other division, when he pushed both sides back, and the way of access was clear.

Andrew moved not, breathed not; and satisfied that the chamber was empty, the burglar crept noiselessly through the window and alighted on the floor.

The Father and his Daughter.

The following beautiful and pathetic lines are said to have been suggested by reading a newspaper paragraph describing the scene between Ethan Allan and his daughter, when the latter on her death-bed asked the stern infidel in whose faith he would have her die—his or her mother's:

'The damps of death are coming fast, My father, o'er my brow; The past with all its scenes have fled, And I must turn me now To that dim future which in vain My feeble eyes descry: Tell me, my father, in this hour In whose stern faith to die.'

'In thine! I've watched the scornful smile, And heard thy withering tone, Whom'er the Christian's humble hope Was placed above thine own; I've heard thee speak of coming death Without a shade of gloom, And laugh at all the childish fears That cluster round the tomb.'

'Or is it in my mother's faith? How fondly do I trace, Through many a weary year long past, That calm and saintly face! How often do I call to mind, Now she is neath the sod, The place, the hour, in which she drew My early thoughts to God!'

'Twas then she took this sacred book, And from its burning page Read how its truths support the soul In youth and falling age; And bade me in its precepts live, And by its precepts die, That I might share a home of love In worlds beyond the sky.'

'My father, shall I look above, Amid this gathering gloom, To Him whose promises of love Extend beyond the tomb? Or curse the Being who hath blessed This checkered path of mine, And promises eternal rest, And die, my sire, in thine?'

IN the days of yore the Kings and Queens were invested with absolute dictatorship, would that it were so, in some respects, at the present day, and that our glorious Queen would issue a proclamation that all should avoid exposure to rain storms, and damp feet. We are anxious in this, and also in stating that it is a blessing, as we cannot enforce the observance of such a custom, that we have the means to face the enemy with, that is, the great Shoshonee Remedy to cure diseases of the Throat, Lungs, Kidneys, Digestive Organs, &c.

THE India and China Tea Company

beg to call the attention of the Canadian community to their directly imported Teas, which for purity and excellence will be found unequalled.

The Company have made arrangements whereby they have secured the entire produce of some of the best plantations in Assam and on the slopes of the Himalayas, and by a judicious blending of these magnificent Teas with the best varieties of China produce, they are enabled to offer to the public Tea of quality and flavour hitherto unknown to the general consumer. These Teas are in high favour in England and France, and a simple trial will prove their superiority.

The Company supply two qualities only, either Black, Green or Mixed. Their Black Teas will be found to possess great brilliancy and flavour, combined with colour and strength, and to be entirely different to the flat and rapid article usually sold as Black Tea; while their Green Teas are altogether free from the deleterious mineral powder so commonly used for coloring the leaf.

PRICES: Rich, full-flavoured Tea, for family use a real gem, and fine article 70 cents per lb. Finest quality procurable, one dollar per lb.

To be had in packets of Quarter Pound Half Pound, One Pound, and upwards, or in tin canisters of 5 lb. and upwards, from the Company's Agents in all the chief towns of Canada.—N.B. All the packages are lined with tin foil paper, and the Tea will consequently retain its flavour any length of time.

Observe.—All packages have the Company's trade-mark, without which none are genuine.
