what uncomfortable at the reminder that between 60.00.000 and 70.000.000 sterting have been imposed by way of taxes on food since the Liberals attained office seven years ago, have been anxious to put themselves right with their constituents by having the existing food taxes considerably reduced. A few weeks ago they presented a memorial to Mr. Lioyd George urging that he should reduce the present faxes on food. The reply they got was by no means satisfactory, for, being in much need of money, the chancellor of the exchequer can not cut off a source of revenue which yields a considerable number of milkions. On the other hand, he dare not impose further taxation on food.

In some quarters it has been anticipated that Mr. Lioyd George will endeavor to raise the necessary wind by piling heavier taxes on the owners of land. Land owners, as the chancellor of the exchequer knows, have few friends and they are supposed to batten on the misseries of the poor. Everybody is aware that Mr. Lioyd George's present ambitton is to make the squires "sit Ip" and, not to put it too high, he has an academic interest in the single tax, which means making the land bear the whole of the burden of national expenditure. As land grows food, taxation of land its taxation of the raw material, and this the radical representatives of rural constituences are beginning to realize that the incidence of taxation of course, he would deep that he was a marter needing reform—the Radical members who have farmers as constitutions are not anxious that anything fur the resoluted by done to alseemate their support.

Besides, it is not forgotiten that Mr.
Lloyd George's endeavors under the 1910 duties have been a flasco. Enormous sums have been spent by an army of valuers making investigation and the return has not been profitable. For instance, in the financial year which has just chapsed he reckoned to get from these duties $2,275,000, but the incomehas fallen short of that amount by $130,000. Indeed there has been a crop of $650,000 on house duty, and $250,000 on lend tax, and well over a half million drop in customs, excise and estate duties. Had it not been that there was an increase of nearly $3,000,000 in the

To be produce $15,000, it is leaves $20,000,000 to be provided for, and the question is: From where is he to get it?

Now I make no rectance to recease of free trade.

Now, I make no pretense to possess to any of the budget secrets. Occosionally there is a little leakage about what is decided at cabinet meetings, but tsirct silence is the order concerning the budget, and any statements which appear in the press are no more than shrewd outside anticipations.

A considerable section of the Liberal party, having taken fright at the withdrawal of their Unionist opponents of food taxation as a part of their policy at the next election, and being somewhat uncomfortable at the reminder that between 60.000.000 and 70.000.000 sterting have been imposed by way of taxes
